BRITISH RETREAT

GERMANS BREAK HAIG'S DEFENCES

150,000 HUN LOSS

ENGLISH ARMIES WITHDRAW TO NEW POSITIONS WEST OF ST. QUENTIN

Washington, March 23.—(Bulletin)—Estimates of casualties of the great battle now in progress reaching the British Embassy today, and covering the period up until last evening, were that the German totaled at least 150,000 and the British less than 100,000.

London, March 23.—At an enormous cost of human life, the Germans have succeeded in penetrating the British defences west of Cambrai. The War Office admitted today that the Germans had broken through some of their positions in the St. Quentin sector, but that the British troops were falling back in good order. "Heavy fighting continued until a late hour of the night," the War Office announced. During the afternoon of Friday the Germans increased their artillery fire and employed heavy masses of infantry. The attacks centred in the sector of St. Quentin, where the British were compelled to give ground. They fell back to previously prepared positions.

The district through which the British retired had previously been completely devastated by the Germans when they made their retreat from the Bapaume-Peronne district last year. It is virtually a desert of blasted land and ruined farmhouses. Even the forests have been leveled.

In spite of the fury of the artillery assault and the heavy pressure of the infantry, the British soldiers behaved with the utmost gallantry and coolness, retiring under orders to fortifications in their rear.

Heavy fighting continues along the entire fifty-mile front from the Oise to the Sensee River.

Along the northern end of the line (southeast of Arras) the British lines held firm in spite of the terrific assaults launched against them.

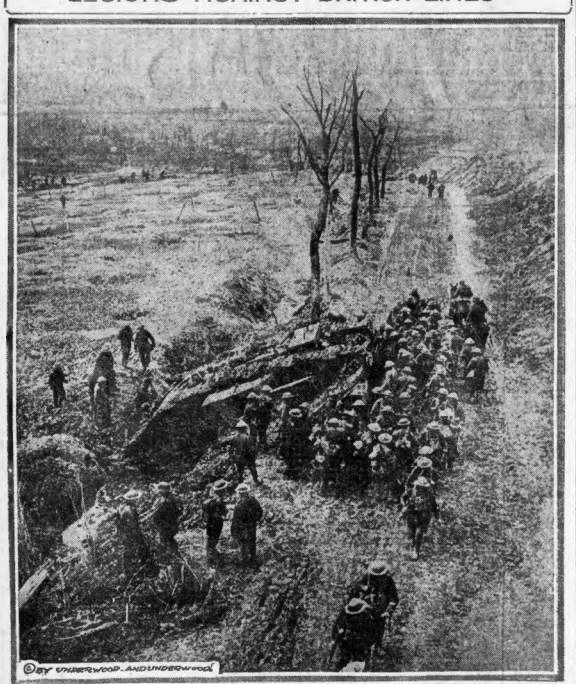
The Germans had concentrated their heaviest guns and their greatest masses of infantry in the St. Quentin sector, south of which point the British and French lines join.

There the Teutonic troops were flung forward in dense formation across ground which had been plowed and churned by artillery fire.

Although raked by machine gun fire from the British trenches and torn by shells from the British explosives, the Germans were able to advance. However, they suffered extraordinary losses.

The Germans continued to throw fresh troops into the fighting, showing that they had received reinforcements during the past twenty-four hours.

TANKS WREAK HAVOC AS GERMANS HURL LEGIONS AGAINST BRITISH LINES



In the great drive that the Germans are making on a fifty-mile front in France, the British are using tanks to meet the onslaught of the foe. This picture shows the Tommies moving one of their battle tanks to another position.

BRITISH FALL BACK IN GOOD ORDER

By FRANK CHARLTON,
International News Service Cable Editor.

The information that the German army has broken through the British front west of St. Quentin is the biggest news which has come from the battle zone in France since the collapse of the German offensive at Verdun nearly two years ago.

The British War Office admits that the Germans are advancing in the St. Quentin sector, saying that the British forces are falling back upon fortified positions which had previously been prepared.

The British are retiring in good order and the indications from the official statement are that the retirement is for strategic reasons to save the lives of troops and the guns.

Apparently the Germans have centered their heaviest attacks in the St. Quentin sector, especial mention being made in the official report of the enormous number of men and guns concentrated there.

The extent of the British retirement in the St. Quentin sector is not indicated, but the ground in that district is flat and had been devastated by the Germans before their great retreat, which may mean that the British might fall back to a point they previously occupied at the beginning of 1917.

PREDICT LONG BATTLE.

The Germans used their usual strategy of striking at both ends of the fifty-mile salient, which struck

AMERICANS CLEAR TRENCH OF GERMANS

London, March 23.—American troops have "cleaned up" another section of the German front line trenches fronting their sector.

The operation which developed into a raid following a heavy all night bombardment was carried out early Friday morning.

In the raiding detachment were some of the soldiers who went over the top in that section on Wednesday night.

The raided trench was found to be lightly held and the Germans were thrown out with little difficulty.

SOLDIER IS KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

One soldier was killed, another was fatally hurt and five others were injured in an automobile accident today in the town of Littleton.

All of the men were members of Company A and C of the 301st—Boston's Own—Infantry.

The dead:

Sergeant P. S. Mullen of Chelsea.

The injured:

Corporal W. J. Mullen, brother to the dead man, at base hospital with fractured skull.

Harold W. Webber, cook in Company C.

Sergeant G. R. Maertins, Co. C.

Private R. A. Tibbetts.

Private James McGovern.

Sacrifice of Territory Expected by War Experts

Washington, March 23.—The British official report announcing that the German hordes had broken through the British defense west of St. Quentin, forcing the withdrawal of Gen. Haig's men to their prepared secondary defense, while a disappointment to officials here in Washington, was not a cause for serious worry. It had already been pointed out by officials of the general staff that the sheer weight of the German offense might make necessary a sacrifice of territory, as it already had compelled the sacrifice

REPORT CAPTURE OF 250,000 BRITISH

Washington, March 22.—The Capitol was thrown into a state of great agitation this afternoon by reports that the Germans have captured 250,000 British soldiers in their mammoth offensive. Other reports that startled Senators and Representatives but were without confirmation were that a most serious breach has been effected by the Germans in the west front. The War Department was besieged with inquiries but was unable to answer any of them.

It Takes 155,000 Pounds of Pullman Car to Carry 6,000 Pounds of Passengers

A Bicycle Weighing 20 Pounds Will Carry a 200-Pound Man. Some Chance for Improvement in the Passenger Car and All Rolling Stock

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

With the people now controlling, soon to own, railroads, economical management, with safety in operation taking the place of unnecessary weight, will be considered.

Henry Ford says, among other wise words:

First, the government should own the railroads and will own them—private owners have proved incompetency, are ready to give the railroads up because they haven't the power, the money or the ability to manage them. (He said this to the writer just before the roads were taken over.)

Second, there is really NOTHING right about the railroads except the excellent roadbeds that some of them have laid.

Third, the railroads have not utilized one-half their capacity.

Tracks are idle for hours when trains should be running.

Fourth, railroad equipment weighs a great deal more than it ought to weigh. Too much of the load is dead weight.

As regards the weight of cars, consider the figures printed above.

You know that a bicycle can be built weighing twenty pounds or even less, and it will carry a man weighing two hundred pounds.

A Pullman sleeping or day coach, weighing on the average 155,000 pounds, and carrying on the average thirty passengers, weighs twenty-five times as much as the load that it carries. These thirty passengers would weigh six thousand pounds, if all thirty were fat.

Think of that, the wagon weighing twenty-five times the load.

Suppose a man weighing two hundred pounds had to have a bicycle weighing twenty-five times as much. That would make a bicycle weigh FIVE THOUSAND POUNDS. A two-hundred-pound man on a five-thousand-pound bicycle would be something amusing.

Six thousand pounds of human load on a car weighing one hundred and fifty-five thousand pounds is also amusing.

Of course it is not possible to build a sleeping car or any kind of a railroad car along the lines of a bicycle.

But it is possible to economize in weight and with safety.

It will be done, abolishing the locomotive entirely with its heavy tender loaded with coal and water.

An electric third rail or overhead wire, carrying the current that weighs nothing, will do away with much weight.

Light passenger trains, protected by automatic block signals and brake-setting apparatus, will run lightly, cutting in two at least the tremendous difference between the weight of the load and the weight of the carrier.

In a thousand ways the old railroad system will be improved, made more efficient, more economical, less expensive for those that use it.

Under public ownership those in charge of railroads will think about RAILROADING, not about getting business away from each other.

They will stop finding how much the traffic will bear, stop robbing the railroad by inside graft, and depleting the railroads by constant issues of bonds and stocks.

The Senate Wisely Abolished One of Its Stupidest Rules

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

Senator Curtis of Kansas, after a seven years' fight, has succeeded in injecting a little progress into the proceedings of the United States Senate.

It was rather an unusual thing to do. It created considerable consternation among some of the aged precedent-incrusted members of the solemn old Senate. But it was worth doing, for it really brought the Senate closer to the people. And if the Senators are going to stay Senators they had better get and keep as close to the people as they can, for the days to come are going to be days of very surprising changes.

Under the aged rules of the Senate, always lived up to religiously, the House would pass a bill for doing a particular thing, and the Senate would pass another.

Then there was appointed a conference committee to reconcile the differences between the House measure and the Senate measure. After that was done the committee reported back to both houses, and the bill was passed all over again.

But it has been the custom of gentlemen who wanted special privileges from Congress to wait until the bill passed both houses and then get the conference committee to change the whole legislation so as to incorporate their desires.

Under the old rule, if either house rejected the new legislation—legislation which had no business in the bill—it had to reject the whole bill.

That brought about delay and fresh discussion. And almost invariably, if a law was really needed, both houses would accept the conference report and the surreptitious legislation rather than to cause delay.

Under the revision he has got his colleagues to accept, anyone can make a point of order against new legislation and send a bill containing such legislation back to the conference committee.

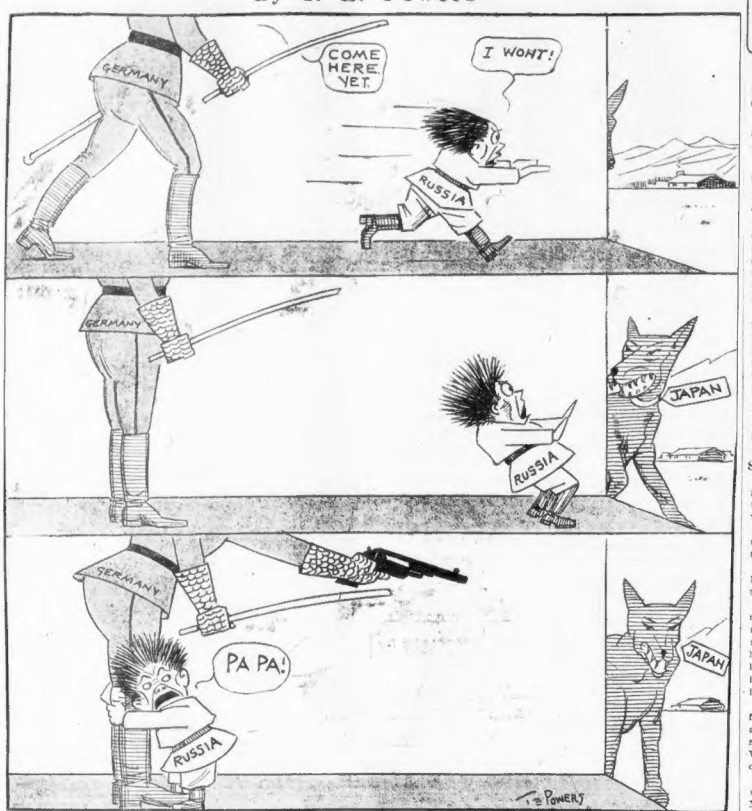
The adoption of such a rule will make all lawmaking simpler and easier. It will also make lawmaking representative of all the people.

The Senate and House legislate in the open, where everything they do or say is in public and of record.

Conference committees work behind closed doors, and no one knows what they are doing or how they are doing it.

There Is True Prophecy in This Picture

By T. E. Powers



For the moment this is what is called a "comic cartoon." Russia runs from the conquering Prussian, refusing to submit and add to his power.

But Russia, coming face to face with fierce Japan, turns back and embraces that from which she had fled.

If this cartoon should become reality, if the people of Russia found themselves face to face with the alternative of rule by Japan or rule by Germany—what would be the result?

And if Japan, fighting into Siberia and Russia, built up on the other side of the Pacific a gigantic empire, if she constructed armies of white Russians officered by capable brown Japanese, and used the labor and wealth of Russia to build great fleets of fighting ships and trading ships on the Pacific—what would that mean to the United States?

This picture is far from being "comic" to those that study world conditions with an eye to the future.

MRS. WILSON WOODROW'S ARTICLE

Ugly Girl, Use the Magic of Your Charm and Your Key of Wisdom to Unlock Beauty's Secrets. Plain Girl Writes to Bemoan Her Fate

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

ARE you an ugly girl? Yes. Then like a recent correspondent of mine you have probably exaggerated the fact, and your misery has been increased by all those pin-pricking quotations in current use, as "A man loves through his eyes," "She is beautiful, and therefore to be wooed," "It is her lot some female errors fall, look on her face and you'll forget them all," etc., etc., ad infinitum.

A Plain Girl

The girl who has written me bemoans the fact that she is the plainest girl in her set, and says that she has become so sensitive about her lack of beauty that she feels increasingly self-conscious and awkward and she wants to know what to do about it. She loves to go out among people, she is very fond of all social gatherings, but it makes her very unhappy to feel that she is always at a disadvantage.

I take it for granted that she doesn't want me to utter a lot of platitudes and tell her that beauty is only skin deep after all, and, paraphrasing Kingsley's famous line, urge her to be a good, sweet maid, let those who can be pretty. She wants to know how to hold her own and be a social success among a whole group of girls undeniably more pleasing in appearance than herself.

In the first place, let us not undervalue the importance of a good appearance. Beauty is a power and a charm and a lure, and because it is all those things many women overestimate it. It is a cocking asset on the journey of life, but if you're only got one asset you are traveling with pretty light luggage—too light by half.

You may not have read Addison's "Cato," neither do I advise you to bore yourself by doing so, but in one of the acts he utters this truth:

"Beauty soon grows familiar to the lover,
Fades in his eye and palls upon the sense."

But, ugly girl, I am wondering just how ugly you are. Not half so much so as you think yourself, I'll bet a farm. But admitting the worst, I have a small opinion of your will and determination and ambition if you are content to remain an ugly girl. You know, the French have a saying that no woman is unattractive who has good eyes and teeth. I will take your word for it that you are plain, but you must have some attractions, a good figure, perhaps, or pretty hands and feet, or a delightful smile, or an intuitive knowledge of how to wear your clothes. You must have some special charm or grace that is all your own. Every one has. Then, whatever it is, emphasize it.

None Is "Ugly"

I do not believe that any girl who is exquisitely neat and dainty can be called ugly. Your hair can always be so well cared for, so shiningly brushed that it will be a pleasure to look at it. A good complexion is not entirely a gift of the gods—it can always be achieved: it is merely a matter of cleanliness and proper diet and enough exercise—that is, unless you have some definite skin trouble.

At least that is true of six persons out of seven; and then comes the seventh. The seventh is the possessor of that secret wisdom which knows that every one has an interesting and lovable side, which only waits the sunshine of a sympathy to reveal itself. To air his own views and hold the centre of the stage is to him a small and unworthy satisfaction.

He is perfectly familiar with his own opinions and that suffices him; he sees no particular reason to brandish them in the face of every one he meets; but to make the other person shine, that is an achievement which is worth while. It is like pouring water on a plant and then watching all its drooping leaves spring up and expand.

Use Your Charm

Oh, no, ugly girl, if you would exercise the white magic of charm and work its miracles, your interest must be real and unfeigned. It must be a matter of unending delight to you to discover the fascinating side of bores, to draw out the wit and sparkle of the stupid, the romance in the prosaic and practical, the south common sense in the flighty. It is all there, waiting for that magic touch of a sincere and unerring sympathy.

If you can achieve this gift and grace, you needn't bother about your looks, no matter if you are as ugly as a gargoyle. The world will make a path to your doorstep.

GETTING READY FOR THE WAR GARDEN

Have you, as a family, completed your plans for the next war garden?

You learned many things last year which you should bear in mind in selecting your seeds.

Now is the time to see that everything is in readiness for the first opportunity to get started outdoors.

Have a memorandum and check it up in detail and see that you do not have to wait for essentials at the last moment.

Gardening cannot be put off till a more convenient time.

If you would be a success at raising garden truck you must be ready to take advantage of every propitious moment.

Don't wait until after the rain which would do the little plants so much good, to set out your seedlings.

Have them in the ground in time and be ready with protection from whatever sort of weather comes.

Plant each thing in succession, so that the first seed may not be wasted in case something unforeseen destroys your first planting.

ENUNCIATE THOUGHTS AS REAL POETRY

By Elizabeth Jordan

SOMEONE with a taste for figures has lightly estimated that we Americans habitually mispronounce eighteen thousand words.

Personally, I considered this estimate too conservative until I remembered that most well educated human beings have only a few thousand words in their vocabulary. It is undoubtedly true that they mispronounce the majority of these words. One cheerfully admits, therefore, that eighteen thousand words, if used, would also undoubtedly be mispronounced.

We cannot defend any national murder of our language by cheerfully explaining that there are so many foreigners among us. As a matter of fact, the educated foreigners often speak our language much better than we do. They take it more seriously. They give words their full value. They do not chop them up and mutilate them as the average American does, every day of his life.

Source of Faults

He cannot be defended on the ground of ignorance. He knows, usually, how to pronounce the words. His faults are threefold.

First, he is careless. He skips syllables and drops the final letters of the words he uses.

Second, he is usually in a hurry. He has a foolish idea of saving time by his slipshod speech.

Third—and most curious explanation of all—he actually has an absurd conviction that correct speech is stilted and artificial! If he has not acquired it in early life he makes no effort to acquire it later. Instead, he rather glories in his slovenly English.

To try to give examples of our frequent blunders is as difficult as to select pebbles from a long stretch of pebble-covered beach. We have instances of carelessness on every side of us.

But take, as one among thousands, the word "government." Most Americans use that word many times every day. One in ten uses it correctly. The other nine say "gover-ment," forgetting altogether the nice sounding and serviceable little "n." Also they pronounce the last syllable as if it were spelled "munt."

The word President is equally ill-treated. It's "pres-dent" to the majority of men and women who use it. And this notwithstanding the fact that the whole nation appreciates and glories in the perfect diction of the man at its head.

Our dropping of letters is as bad in its way as our dropping of syllables. We're "gettin," "goin," "doin," "bein." We're "seein" and "hearin." We're "makin" and "takin," and "leavin" or "stayin"—but we are rarely putting our neglected little "g" in the place where it belongs.

We have an equally airy way of combining two words or more into one—with the same fatuous and foolish notion of saving time. "Hy up," we yelp, when some one lags behind—"M on."

Actual Crimes

"Mussentouch," we tell the helpless baby, who is doing its pathetic little best to learn English from our lips. We "dunno" or we "guessyes" or we "takeachance."

Occasionally we go out of our way to destroy a perfectly good word or pair of words for no reason in the world, apparently, except our ingrained objection to the right thing.

"Nope," we say. "Yep." "Alrighty." This is sheer murder.

Over half the telephone wires in the land pours the incessent "Listen." "The telephone, indeed, is an excellent place to study the latest methods of word-slaughter. Over it the talk of many men and women flows into our ears.

MYSTERIOUS ZODIACAL LIGHT IS DUE

By Garrett P. Serviss

MARCH is an excellent time for evening observations of one of the most mysterious of all celestial phenomena—the Zodiacal Light. On a clear night, as soon as the twilight has faded, a careful observer may see, if the air about his point of observation is not too much permeated with artificial illumination, a soft, pearly light, in shape like a slender pyramid or cone, rising from the horizon at the place of sunset, leaning a little southward and sometimes reaching at least half way to the zenith, but fading so gradually at the edges that its true boundaries are difficult to trace.

Inexperienced observers, when the Light appears unusually bright, sometimes mistake it for the tail of a gigantic comet. Its axis lies in the plane of the ecliptic, which is the apparent yearly path of the sun through the sky. In February, March and April the ecliptic meets the western horizon at a steep angle so that the sun goes down almost perpendicularly in middle latitudes and the Zodiacal Light streams nearly straight upward. This is the chief reason why the phenomenon can be better seen in the Spring evenings.

On the other hand, the best time for morning observations of the Light is in the Autumn. The finest view I ever had of it—a view astonishing in its beauty and grandeur—was from the summit of the black crater cone of Mount Etna, 11,000 feet above sea level, before sunrise in the early Autumn. In equatorial regions the Light is seen extending to and beyond the zenith and occasionally completely spanning the sky.

Reflections Freak

The general explanation of the Zodiacal Light is that it is due to the reflection of sunlight from a diffuse swarm, or cloud, of meteoric particles circling around the sun within a lens-shaped region whose greatest extension lies nearly in the plane of the ecliptic and, at least slightly, overpasses the orbit of the earth.

As far as it goes, the evidence of the spectroscope, analyzing the Light, supports the conclusion that in its nature it is nothing more than reflected sunlight.

Associated with the Zodiacal Light is another phenomenon of a similar light, though much less conspicuous, the Gegenschein, a faint rounded patch of light seen in the night sky opposite to the position of the sun. Unlike the Zodiacal Light the Gegenschein is about equally visible at all seasons of the year, except when its place happens to fall in or near the Milky Way or when its light is overpowered by the moon. It was regarded by Professor Newcomb as probably an intensification of the Zodiacal Light at the point where the effect of the reflection from the meteoric particles is sent back nearly straight toward the sun, and therefore toward the earth lying between that point and the sun.

The apparent size of the Gegenschein varies with the acuteness of the observer's eyes. Professor Barnard, who probably knows more about it from personal observation than any other astronomer, has sometimes seen it about ten degrees in diameter, although usually he finds its diameter nearer five degrees.

Peculiar Power

As with all phenomena arising beyond the limits of the earth, and appearing in interplanetary or interstellar space, there is something about the Zodiacal Light that gives it a peculiar power over the spectator. Instinctively the mind recognizes the stupendous units of size and distance that are involved. Supposing the light reflecting swarm to extend a million miles beyond the earth's orbit, and to fill all the intervening space to the sun, the circumference of the lenticular region thus occupied is not less than 590,000,000 miles.

The word "all," however, should not be understood as implying an enormous quantity of matter or a great density. On the contrary, the particles reflecting the sunlight must be so sparsely scattered that placed in the midst of them we should be unaware of their aggregate existence. It may well be, too, that there are no solid particles, or meteors, concerned in the phenomenon, but only, as Newcomb suggested, a very tenuous gas.

of men and guns. There was, however, no doubt left in the minds of army officers that the battle on the Western front is the culminating effort of the German forces.

It is now accepted as certain that the Kaiser and his chief advisers, Von Hindenburg and Von Ludendorff, have decided to stake all on this blow and that they will throw into it every available man. It may mean, officials here said, that the supreme war council's plans for utilization of reserves from other points will be called into use before the present drive is stopped.

However, army officers who are closely watching the situation insisted again today that they did not believe the Germans would gain a victory in the west. The British can continue to withdraw before them for some time yet, it was said, meanwhile continuing to inflict enormous casualties on the enemy and sustaining only comparatively heavy losses themselves.

Suggestions that possibly the Germans would seize the present as the opportunity to launch an assault by their high seas fleet were considered with deep interest here today. It is known that in the plans of the German high command the utilization of the fleet is a prominent factor. But it is not believed here that the time for such a move is ripe. If the Germans are driving toward the sea then the fleet must be used to protect the right flank when it reaches a certain point. But until that point actually is reached, officers here point out, there would be nothing gained by risking a naval engagement.

It is considered certain here that the German drive against the British is designed in part for the political effect it may have in Great Britain. But here it will fail, officials say, if it is designed to intimidate the British people. All of the cables from London emphasize the equanimity with which the British are awaiting the final result.

In explanation of the situation, a strategist of the general staff made the following statement to the International News Service today:

"Germany's attack has excelled her initial efforts at Verdun. She attacked en masse along the entire British line. Her troops were in three columns. In front were the shock forces, young men picked because of their strength and ability, who had been especially trained for this work.

FOOTHOLDS IN FIRST LINE.

"The second line was made up of the veteran units from the West and East, technically termed the 'mopers up.' The third line was the reserves, who were to hold the captured positions after they were consolidated. But the first and second lines were badly cut up and all that they succeeded in accomplishing was to get footholds in the British front line trenches. They at no point drove the British out of their battle positions, and for that matter are still under the British massed guns. In order to make their resistance effective the British were compelled to hold their front at all points to the very last. And, as the official communications show, this naturally resulted in losses to the defending forces and it is logical to assume that it was these losses which the Germans now are parading.

"The British line being back before the force of the German assaults. This was wise strategy. It allowed the infliction of terrific losses at a minimum cost. When it is remembered that this supreme assault was initiated by 40 German divisions, it will be seen that sheer weight of numbers demanded that the British retire slowly, waiting for the attack to reach its maximum before doing more than continue the defensive.

"The counter objective was to drive great wedges into both sides of the Cambrai salient, thereby cutting off thousands of British forces and permitting an encircling movement. That effort seemingly has been checked for the time being, but it will be renewed.

PREPARE COUNTER ATTACK.

"It may be expected that the German attack will be continued for some time to come. It is plain that the high command believes that the British cannot hold. Our information is all to the contrary. And when the German attack has reached its maximum it is well nigh certain that the British will initiate a counter offensive that must have a far reaching effect.

"It also can be expected that there will be another grand assault against the French line and also against the positions held by the Americans. For excellent reasons it is inadvisable to discuss this point. But there need be no real uneasiness here. The supreme war council has taken into consideration every possibility and has planned to oppose it."

MAY EXTEND DRAFT TO MEN OF 45

Senate Would Strengthen War Arm of U. S. on Battle News From France

By International News Service.

Washington, March 23.—With bulletins of the German drive before them, the Senate this afternoon sidetracked all other business to devote its energies exclusively to measures for strengthening America's fighting arm.

Returning to the capitol from their weekly conferences with the War Council, the members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee immediately brought up the bill for the drafting of all young men who have attained the age of twenty-one years since registration day. The measure, it was estimated would add 700,000 men annually to the list available for the draft.

WANTS ARMY DOUBLED.

Senators sounded the gravest warnings to urge unhesitating action. Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the committee, declared that the reports being received today made it appear that it might become necessary to advance the age limit for the draft to bring in men past thirty-one and as high as forty-five.

Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia declared that the strength of the army should be doubled.

Senator Smith said that the number of men should be doubled as well as the supply of powder.

"And what's more, we should get some force and drive and real administrative ability behind our artillery program," he declared.

Senator Hardwick of Georgia tried to have the bill amended to let out drafted men as they attain the age of 21 years. This was advocated by Secretary of War Baker, but rejected by the Senate Military Affairs Committee. The amendment was shouted down by an overwhelming chorus of "Noes."

FOR UNIVERSAL TRAINING.

Senator New of Indiana took advantage of the crisis to rally the advocates of universal military training. He proposed to make the 21-year-old registration bill permanently operative. This would be, in effect, universal military training. He declared he would insist upon a record vote on the measure.

Shells Rain on Defenders and Patrols Increase Activity All Along Front

By International News Service.

Rome, March 23. — While German and Austro-Hungarian artillery are throwing shells across the Piave River against Italian positions, the enemy patrols have increased their activity along practically the entire front, according to advices received today from the battle zone.

In the Frenzela Valley some German troops succeeded in gaining a footing in an advanced Italian position, but were put to flight when the Italians made a counter attack.

In the mountains between the Asiago plateau and the upper Piave there has been an increase in both the infantry and artillery operations.

LAWYERS TO MARCH IN BIG LOAN PARADE

Boston lawyers, as a profession, will be in line in the Liberty Loan parade in April as the result of a favorable vote by the Lawyers' Preparedness Committee. Notices will be sent to members of the bar by a sub-committee, appointed to take charge of this part of the parade. Lawyers are requested, however, to send their names to the committee at 404 Sears Building.

A committee has also been appointed to canvass the lawyers of Boston in aid of the sale of Liberty Bonds.

into their front between the Scarpe River and the Oise River.

The army attacking the southern end of the salient was more successful than that attacking the northern end, for the British War Office reports that the positions along the northern end of the front under attack have held firm, despite the tremendous pressure exerted against them.

If, as it is generally admitted now, the present drive on the western front is really the long heralded German offensive, a prolonged battle of bloody proportions may be expected.

The Germans have concentrated an unprecedented number of guns on the western front and the bulk of their infantry attacks are filled with bombardments which shake the ground for scores of miles as though an earthquake was rocking it.

Despite the fury of the German assaults and the retirement of the British forces, the morale of England and France remains unshaken. The calmness and courage of England is reflected in the brave conduct of the British soldiers on the fighting line.

All of the reports of the fighting emphasize the severity of the German losses.

ATTACK AT JUNCTION POINT.

It was stated by a German military authority before the German drive started that Germany was prepared to lose 300,000 men if a victory could be achieved on the Western front, but according to the information received from the western front so far the British line cannot be broken even at such a tremendous cost as this.

The Germans are attacking at the point where the British and French armies join. The are apparently driving westward their in a straight line, which makes it hard to tell what their decisive objective really is.

Field Marshal Haig in his official report to the British War Office admitted that the Germans had penetrated the defensive system west of St. Quentin. This does not mean, however, that the British front has been breached. The British front consists of a series of fortified lines, one lying behind the other. The British front will not be broken until all of these are penetrated. So far the Germans have been able to get through one system of defensive positions a a tangle point.

The War in Europe

By ANTHONY ARNOUX,
Famous Writer on Military Topics.

While it is yet distinctly too soon to assert positively that the German assault on the British line from the Oise River near La Fere to the Sensee River at Croisilles on the wide front of fifty miles is the major attack of the long-expected Teutonic offensive, the signs seem to point that way.

If it were merely a feint, the front would hardly be as long as it is, nor would the assault be pressed on the whole of the front with that great vigor which General Haig reports characterizes it.

But on the other hand, from what we know of the general situation, not only military, but political and economic, abroad, the grand strategy of the war would seem to indicate that an offensive against the French would be likely to have greater results in a larger variety of ways than one against the British.

If this is the real offensive, we shall almost certainly see the greatest battle in the history of the world, larger even than that Titanic struggle, the battle of the Somme, in the number of men engaged, as well as in the amount of artillery and other material used.

Probably the combat will be a long one, and fought with the utmost desperation, coolness and science. Undoubtedly the casualties will be counted in thousands, as the two arch enemies are locked in what may be the death grapple for one or the other.

From what little has come to us, it would appear that the leaders on both sides are slightly nervous, a condition not at all unnatural in view of the size of the stakes at risk.

Nothing can yet be deduced one way or the other from any of the developments which have so far taken place in the battle, as to its ultimate result or even as to the tactical advantages, which either side may have won. The reports are too scanty, too brief, and besides the time which the battle has now lasted is too short to have allowed any of the movements made or operations undertaken to arrive at point of development which permits an analysis of its chances of success or failure, and the effect of such success or failure on its co-ordinated movements or operations. Possibly it will be a full ten days before we reach such a point.

Only this can be said of the battle at the present time. The Germans drove in the British outpost troops at a number of points, and at a smaller number of places they penetrated to the British battle line. These things happen in the first rush of every large offensive, are natural and almost inevitable. The British counter attacks have not fully developed and until their results are known we cannot even estimate the positive results of the first rush.

Austrian troops are, according to the bulletins, actually participating in the fighting, a fact worthy of note, in view of the recent diplomatic efforts to detach Austria from Germany. It is also evident from the bulletins that the central powers dispose of vast numbers of strategic and tactical reserves. Of course, in an assault of this magnitude there could be no quetion of surprise; the very enormousness of the necessary prepadations behind the lines would inevitably give warning to the opposing side of what was about to happen.

Elsewhere on the western line there was considerable activity, particularly near Verdun and in Champagne.

The Italian front was reported to be more active, but there does not seem to be anything significant in these activities.

THOUSANDS SIGN TO GET ELEVATED UNDER PUBLIC CONTROL

PETITIONS SWEEP CITY

Wave of Enthusiasm Marks Big Fight to Get Better Car Service for Boston

A mighty public impetus is behind the plan for public control of the Boston Elevated Railway.

This impetus will give public control the push that will send it "over the top." Thousands are added daily to the army of petitioners who are appealing to the Legislature to put the public in charge of this road and run it in the public interest.

Not only are the petitions coming in by the thousands, but many men are circulating them throughout the cities and towns served by the Elevated, and they are to be found in drugstores, in tobacco stores and elsewhere.

And among the thousands of signers are many employes of the Boston Elevated Railway. These men know that under public control the conditions under which they labor would be improved.

They have complained of the dangerous overcrowding of cars and the poor condition of cars, and it has done no good. The employes of the road are as much a part of the people as the riders themselves and they are convinced that, with public control these conditions would not be tolerated.

CAUGHT THE CROWD RIGHT.

When an Elevated car stalled on Washington street near the Dudley street terminal, an opportunist on board who had a batch of petitions promptly got them out and passed them throughout the car. He got the signature of nearly every passenger on board. The conductor signed.

On the first day that the Boston AMERICAN made its appeal to the people to stand behind the Public Service Commission and place the public in control of the Elevated road as they recommended, nearly four thousand people signed the petitions.

The next day the number was increased by over six thousand. In two days more than ten thousand different signatures had been received. And every day the number increased over the day before, hundreds sending in their petitions by mail.

If any proof is needed of the tremendous interest in public control this should supply it. Nothing more instantly popular has come before the people for many years. As loudly as actions can proclaim, it tells that the people will not be satisfied with any solution for the poor service given by the Elevated short of actual public control.

This idea is emphasized also by leaders in various parts of the city who declare that private control has failed utterly in giving the people the service that is needed.

A WORD FROM REVERE.

Roscoe Walsworth, president of the Revere City Council, points out in a statement that if service was the object of street railways, Revere would not be suffering for lack of proper transportation facilities. He points out discrepancies which public control would correct.

Head what he has to say:

"With government control, whether the nation or a municipality, making good in every activity where they have taken hold, and with every one admitting the present 'intolerable conditions' in the transit conditions of the metropolitan district, let me pass those questions and point out a great wrong due to 'private ownership,' which public control could and would sweep away instantly.

"Within four miles of Boston City Hall, developed with public money, is the great ocean resort, Revere Beach, convenient for the congested people of this district, and yet with its millions of visitors the Boston Elevated as an example in a transportation system that is an indictment of private control and a 'gentlemen's agreement' between companies which the people have never been able to improve because there is no real public control.

WHERE REMEDY IS NEEDED.

"Here are a few present operating features which public control would not tolerate:

"1. It costs eleven (11) cents to go from Scollay square by the East Boston Tunnel to this beach, the shortest way, but you can retain over exactly the same route for eight (8) cents.

"2. The East Boston Tunnel service, which could give the service with its big cars and speed, stops at Orient Heights in sight of the beach, or in the centre of Chelsea. They only 'connect' with Beach cars, and for another fare.

"3. The six-cent single fare takes you the longest way and through the most congested sections of Boston and over its drawbridges, which are in constant use.

"4. From the same platform in Scollay square subway, whether it costs you 5 or 6 cents to get to the North Station or to Charlestown over the very same rails, depending on which car you happen to take.

"5. A 1,000-mile country system, extending from Fall River to Nashua, admitting its failure to give relief in a receiver, is still allowed to control this beach traffic because of its very small 'pie wedge' to Scollay square. And the operating schedule as the season opens is reduced instead of increased.

"The people of Revere want relief. They want the privileges their location justifies. And it is Boston's problem because Revere Beach belongs also to Boston and the State. Ingus also to Boston and the State. Private ownership has failed, it has never been fair. There is no answer except 'public service under public control.'"

DAUGHTER OF LATE ADOLPHUS BUSCH WITH 'UNDESIRABLE' COUNT

Mrs. Hugo Reisinger, daughter of the late Adolphus Busch, the millionaire brewer, and Count Robert de Clairmont, who is declared "undesir able" by the Federal authorities and faces deportation to France. Mrs. Reisinger has been questioned by the Department of Justice agents as to the count and his associates, Mme. Storch, Mme. Nix and Baron de Beville, all of whom are facing deportation. Mrs. Reisinger said she considered Count de Clairmont a loyal French-man and did not believe he was connected in any way with German intrigue.

Crowds in Subway Crush Eager to Sign American's Petition.

By MARIE DUNBAR

And the cattle cars of the West became illumined glories compared with the conditions of the Boston Elevated.

Groans, swear words that would put the roughest of street urchins to shame, and exclamations of strife and pain, came from cars which passengers were attempting to board.

The surging crowds, moving in opposite directions, caused a continual friction. A large group of people, whose eyes were glued on the announciators, would make a dash in one direction for their cars, while another group scrambled in the opposite direction.

In my hand I carried a bundle of the petitions demanding that the Boston Elevated be placed under the control of the Public Service Commission, and which would eliminate these conditions, inadequate decent and efficient street railway service in the city of Boston and the surrounding communities.

What do the people of Boston want? What do they think of being herded into the cars like cattle? Doesn't the tired workingman and the harassed business man ever grow weary of thinking that at the close of his day's work he must give himself up to this wild mob? I determined to find out.

HE KNEW AND HE SIGNED.

I looked for my first victim. I chose a middle-aged, intelligent looking man, who was intensely interested in his paper.

"Won't you sign this petition for better street car service in Boston?" I asked in a hollow-sounding voice. "You know——"

"Yes, Miss, I know all about it," interrupted the man briskly, as he reached for one of the petitions, "and you don't need to explain any longer. I'll sign it with pleasure."

Optimistic, I approached a workingman.

"Will you please sign this petition for better street car service?" I asked. The man asked for a full explanation. I read him the petition.

"Say, girlie, I wish you would let me sign a dozen or two of those petitions," he exclaimed. "No one knows better than we workingmen what it is to enter this cattle-driven herd every evening and fight for even standing room on the cars."

"Delighter," answered a cultured looking man when I approached him for his signature. "Nothing could give me greater pleasure than to sign this."

WANTED TO SIGN A DOZEN.

"Say, listen to me," remarked another young man. "I don't grab these cars twice a day without being half murdered, and I would gladly sign dozens of those petitions if I could. I sent my petition to the Boston AMERICAN last evening. Good luck to you."

Women responded as willingly as the men, and their hands were on the petitions and their names written down before you fairly had time to approach them. They knew of the conditions from experience, and they explained that they had been watching the campaign for better service with earnest interest.

After approaching more than sixty people I knew what the people of Boston wanted. They did not use weak terms to express it.

No, my pathway was not all rose strewn. There were three people out of that sixty who would not sign.

"No, I don't care anything about it," snapped one woman. "Doesn't interest me. I have a hard enough time getting along without bothering with petitions." She refused to consider that some of the burdens of her hard working day would be relieved by the improvement of the car congestion.

SLACKER OR STOCKHOLDER.

Did you ever hear a slacker explain just why he is not in the service? Well, if you have, then you can understand how I knew that I had spotted a stockholder. Following my request that he sign the petition he explained at some length that he was not interested, but that he thought that all lines should charge six-cent fares. I marked him down as a slacker in the civic affairs of the city of Boston and moved on.

The third man said he was not interested and that the street car service was good enough for him. On questioning him I found that he used the cars about once a week.

As I trudged from the howling mob in the subway up to the street I was certain of one thing—that if the petitions act as a barometer to the sentiment and feeling of the people of Boston in connection with the deplorable street car conditions, they will refuse longer to be the cattle-herder street car travelers.

Mr. Lewis, as a legislator, was the father of the Lewis bone dry law, passed in the 1917 session of the General Court.

FRENCH ADMITS SLAPPING HIS WIFE'S FACE

Retaliated Because She Stuck Her Fingers in His Eyes, He Testifies

"It would be a travesty on justice if I granted the petition for separate support," said Judge Grant in the Suffolk Probate Court in the action of Mrs. Julia F. French against her husband, Charles W. French, an instructor at the Boston Latin School. "This is a question as to the disposition of the children. There is no denying but what Mrs. French has been in the company of Mr. Loughrey. Judging by the testimony, I'll continue the case until Friday, April 5."

Charles W. French, the respondent, testified in his own behalf. He was represented by former Assistant District Attorney Thomas H. Lavelle, who cousel, who led him step by step through the scenes and incidents which led up to the separation of himself and wife.

Mrs. French, who sat here prior to Mr. Loughrey, who figures in the case, followed him closely.

Mrs. Loughrey, who had testified against her husband and had stated that she thought more of her cats than she did of her husband, leaved forward to get Mr. French's testimony.

Mr. French testified he was married seven years old and that in all married life with he became in No. 15 School street, Roxbury. He said he met his wife at Block Island in the Summer of 1905 when he was head bellman at a hotel. He moved to Somerville in the Fall or 1910. He testified he owns a house at Jupiter Point, Nantasket, which he bought five years ago. There is a mortgage in which he holds an equity. He never had any financial difficulties till Loughrey came into his life, he said.

SLAPPED WIFE'S FACE.

Your wife testified you assaulted her."

"Only once."

"Where was that?"

"At the home in Somerville."

"Will you explain how it happened?"

"That night I was going out and she grabbed my hat. I remonstrated with her. She stuck her fingers in my eyes. I slapped her face. I thought it was a terrible thing to do."

"Did you know Loughary then?"

"Yes, but he had nothing to do with that."

"When did you first know your wife had known Loughrey?"

"I had heard his name mentioned Christmas week, 1916."

"Did you know about him meeting her at the Collateral loan co.?"

"No, but she told me she met him."

"Where did you first meet him?"

"On Tremont street. I was introduced to him. I discussed his health and I told him to come to my beach home. He said that salt water didn't agree with him. This was the Summer of 1916."

"Did you ever go any place with him?"

"In the Fall of 1916 I went to a boxing match at the Arena with him."

Mr. French testified on another occasion to attending another boxing match with Loughary at the Commercial Club.

BECAME SUSPICIOUS.

Mr. French said he became suspicious of Loughary and his wife.

"What made you suspicious?"

"Something had happened during the week of August 13 which made me curious and suspicious," he said. "I went home on a Wednesday and found this man's jackknife. In addition I found a cigar stub and several burnt matches. The hallways when painted to go to the beach had been painted. I saw footprints around which the dust had gathered. Saturday morning I went to his office, and I asked him if he had been to the beach, and he said he had."

2 HURT IN AUTO CRASH NEAR NORTH READING

Charles W. Gebel of No. 1518 North Shore road, Revere, was injured internally and J. L. Edey of No. 415 East street, Lawrence, sustained cuts and bruises when two automobiles which they were driving collided on Main street in North Reading. Gebel is now at the Massachusetts General Hospital and Edey is at the Lawrence Hospital in Lawrence.

The two machines collided on the Andover and Lawrence boulevard. Edey, in a heavy, closed car, with two passengers, was driving in the direction of Lawrence. Gebel was approaching from the direction of Andover in a light runabout, also with passengers. None of the passengers were injured.

HOLD WITNESS FOR GADSKI'S HUSBAND

New York, March 23.—Earl Tucker, one of the important witnesses for Hans Tauscher, husband of Mme. Gadski, the prima donna, has been arrested here for alleged German propaganda on the Pacific coast. In June, 1916, Tucker testified for Tauscher when he was tried for alleged implication in the plot to blow up Welland Canal. Tauscher was freed of $14. Browne's home is on Franklin street in Allston. A fifteen-year old boy, charged with being Brown's accomplice, was held in the Juvenile session for a continuance on April 4.

NAT GOODWIN ADMITS BATHS IN VINEGAR

Much Married Comedian Denies Old Cider Plunge as Cure for "Hangover"

New York, March 22.—Nat Goodwin's famous recipe for "vinegar baths" was made known yesterday to Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum and a jury.

Before detailing the make-up of the bath, however, the much-married comedian explained that he never bathed in old cider to recover from the "morning after," as the Mirror Film Company's witnesses declared. He said a famous doctor in Germany, in the days before the war, told him of the recipe. He was then recovering from broken bones and shock resulting from an automobile accident.

Questions in reading the Mirror Film company, for which he was discharged by violating of his contract, he explained, he engaged himself to come to work late and to avoid associating with night life alone, with the champagne bottle. Clifford B. Harmon, president of the film company, said Goodwin's valet told him the comedian took vinegar baths at night to make quick recovery from drinking bouts. Goodwin denied this emphatically, declaring he does not drink intoxicants.

WIFE DEFENDS HIM.

In corroboration of his statement, he called his fifth wife, who has attended the trial, and had her questioned.

"Did your husband ever come into the house on his hands and knees?" she was asked, "as some witness has testified?"

"Never," she replied. "I know, because I always get him in myself, as he has no pass key."

"This is the best house I've played before in some time," said Goodwin yesterday, as he looked about the crowded court room.

"Tell us how to take a vinegar bath," said his lawyer.

"You take a tub of water at 110 degrees," said the actor.

"How much then?"

"You pour in one and one-half gallons of vinegar."

"Next?"

"Put in two pounds of bicarbonate of soda to make it foam."

"Then?"

"Jump into the bath and jump out again. That's all there is to it."

Goodwin said he used to take the vinegar baths often, but lately he has bathed in the effervescing water and cider only once a week. If something took down his hours, he said, to get the bath made up at the right temperature.

TRIAL ENDS MONDAY.

Goodwin testified he never told Harmon that he (Goodwin) was to play in a moving picture company of his own, backed by Charles M. Schwab's money.

A half dozen actors, writers and photographers testified they never had seen Goodwin intoxicated and had not observed that he failed to keep moving picture production by coming late to the studio.

The trial will be concluded Monday.

5 HELD FOR PERJURY IN SENATOR'S TRIAL

Chicago, March 23.—Five persons were taken into custody by State's Attorney Hoynes here, today on a charge of perjury and conspiracy in connection with the trial of State Senator John M. Powell, accused of a serious offence by sixteen-year-old Margaret O'Connor.

Three of the witnesses confessed to perjury, according to the State's attorney. They are the O'Connor girl and Florence and Sophie McKibbon, said to have been in the party the night the girl is said to have taken to a hotel.

Senator held are the O'Connor girl, her aged mother, the McKibbon sisters and Morris Green, secretary to Powell.

"We have incontrovertible proof that Powell was willing to pay to get them to fail to identify Powell," said State's Attorney Hoyne today.

HOUSE COLLAPSES, MAN'S BACK BROKEN

Carl D. Eisaele's back was broken in the collapse of the second floor in a house which was being torn down on the Chestnut Hill estate of E. H. Dane, one of Brookline's selectmen. Eisaele was working on the first floor when the timbers crashed down on him. Dr. Francis J. McMahon of No. 370 Washington street, Brookline, is at the Brigham Hospital. The victim was conscious, but with no use of his legs. He is thirty-eight years old and lives in Reservoir road, Brookline.

PATRIOTIC TALKS DAILY ON COMMON

Short talks on patriotism are being given on the Common at 8 o'clock weekday mornings and at 6 in the afternoon by the lieutenant-Governor Franklin Jones of the Shepard Hills Club. U. S. ATTORNEYS IN CLASS 5 OF DRAFT

Communication received by District Appeal Board No. 4 in reply to a telegram concerning the classification of United States attorneys said that the United States District Attorneys should be classed in class five and that the Assistant United States District Attorneys should be unclassified.

SWEETHEART'S flag, the latest in service banners which is expected to be all the rage among single women whose "heroes" are at the front.

This invention of Cupid is intended to be displayed by the girl whose sweetheart is on the firing line, or near it. The photograph shows the first sweetheart service flag to be seen in Boston. The girl is Miss Marguerite Faust of the senior class of the New England Conservatory of Music.

The "sweetheart service flag" is the emblem of hearts across the sea.

There have been banners of Mars and Cupid, are marching their appearance in Boston.

When you see one displayed in a house it means that some girl lives there whose sweetheart is "over there," fighting for Liberty.

It is permitted every girl who is engaged to one of Uncle Sam's men at the front to display this flag.

The ban almost speaks for itself, so appropriate is its design. It bears a heart on a white field. In the centre of the heart is a blue star.

The heart, of course, is the girl. The white field symbolizes the purity of the girl's heart.

So long as the soldier's life is sacrificed in his country's cause the blue star is replaced by a gold one, as on the regular service flag.

IRKUTSK TAKEN BY TEUTON PRISONERS

Interned Army Captures Great Fortied City in Siberia

By FRANK H. KING,
Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

Tokio, March 23.—Irkutsk, the great fortified city in Siberia, capital of the province of Irkutsk, has been captured by 60,000 German prisoners as a result of the first pitched battle with Red Guards and Bolsheviki, according to official dispatches which have reached the Foreign office.

The Germans, the same dispatches stated, are operating altogether 120,000 German and Austro-Hungarian prisoners in Siberia. The army which captured Irkutsk consisted of two divisions, each 30,000 strong.

Japanese Minister Oshima authorized this statement:

"The supplies at Vladivostok are safe so far. Japan is investigating the activities of the Teuton war prisoners."

The Mikado has returned to Tokio and at once upon his arrival went into conference with the Elder Statesmen. A series of highly important meetings is now on.

8 WOMEN CALLED FOR MANSTER TRIAL

Eight women are included among the list of prospective witnesses summoned for the murder trial of Harry H. Manster, which begins Monday before Judge Sanderson in the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court in Pemberton square courthouse.

Manster is charged with first degree murder by shooting Mounted Patrolman Joseph C. Reiser of the Back Bay police station in an apartment house on Jersey street on Sunday, January 20, after Reiser had placed Manster under arrest on suspicion of having been connected with a string of burglaries in the Back Bay district.

COST IS IGNORED IN FIXING FISH QUOTATIONS

Manager Beardsley of Exchange Says He Makes Prices "Fair to Consumers"

William Beardsley, general manager of the New England Fish exchange, largest wholesaler of fish in the country, on the stand testifying in the government suit to dissolve the asserted "fish trust," admitted that the prices of fish to the retailers were fixed without regard to the actual cost of the fish.

Beardsley testified that he himself fixed the prices for the exchange members and that these were got at a figure which he thought "fair to the consumers."

The suit is being heard before Examiner William A. Matheson in the Federal building. Beardsley was questioned by Special Assistant Attorney-General H. J. McNamara. Address U. S. Custom House, Boston.

ABOUT 10 PER CENT.

Beardsley testified that the assessments which are set each week by the exchange amount to about 10 per cent. on the cost of the fish. This assessment varies on different kinds and runs from as low as 1 cent per pound on swordfish, Eastern halibut, mackerel, etc.

The exchange and the allied companies, the Boston Fish Market Corporation, have other sources of income than the sale of fish, he said. Every vessel coming to the fish piers is compelled to pay a wharfage charge of three cents for every 100 pounds of fish that its crew brings in. This is true also of fish landed in about a per cent of the price of the fish.

MUST PAY FOR SCALES.

The use of scales for weighing must also be paid for, and the charge varies from 31 to 37 for the weighing of each basket or each hatch. The market corporations have also a charge for offices, restaurants, etc., it was established.

An attempt by Attorney McClennan to get out of the records the reason why New York fish prices are higher than Boston on the exchanges met with a sharp objection from Attorney Burnham.

The various questions of the Assistant Attorney-General, Mr. Beardsley responded, "I do not know." When asked for the books of accounts and regarding the witness that he "would be glad to produce them," he replied that there was a strenuous opposition to the remark from the representative of the government.

The next hearing will be held March 30 at the Federal building.

Washington, March 23. — Finger prints of all officers in the U. S. army now in the service or about to be made public by the War Department. These records will be forwarded to the office of the adjutant general, where they will be kept on file for the purpose of identification.

TRUCK CARRIES MAIL IN 180 MILE TEST

Sets Up a Record in Delivery of Parcel Post in Speed and Efficiency

By C. F. DONNOCKER.

The government has been quick to realize the shortcomings of the railroads and their inability to cope with the present freight and mail service, and has made experiments with motor trucks for the parcel post service.

A recent run from Lancaster, Pa., to New York city emphasized also the importance of good roads for such traffic. The test was made by the Post Office Department on Saturday, March 29. The run of 180 miles was covered by a regular parcel post truck, loaded with eggs, butter, honey and day-old chicks in actual running time of 10 hours between the two points.

The truck—a one-and-one-half ton Autocar, made by the Autocar Company, Ardmore, Pa.—left the Lancaster Postoffice at 4:05 a. m. It drew up at 234 street, Jamaica, New York city, at 4:17 in the afternoon and by 4:30 the shipment had all gone. This brings within a daily shipment of New York city all farms within a radius of 180 miles.

A RECORD FOR SERVICE.

In telling of the trip at a dinner of the Motor Truck Club, New York, Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General Blakeslee declared that this event was the first time in the history of the country, by freight, express or mail, that a shipment was made from producer to the consumer in one day, over a distance of more than 100 miles.

"It is an epoch in the history of the United States and of the world," said Francis M. Huntington, Secretary of State of New York, in discussing the achievement at the dinner. "Just consider," he said, "the marvelous significance of making every producing farm within 180 miles of the city a real suburb in close and practicable shipping distance."

He pointed out how much it would help in solving the feeding problems not only of New York, but of all big industrial centres and also the benefit it would give the rural population thus put in such close contact with the consumer.

Mr. Blakeslee said the Post Office Department had found that experiments in many sections of the country that a motor truck could profitably collect and deliver mail, including farm produce, from points fifty miles away, within a day of twelve hours. He estimated that 1,500 such trucks could perform this service twice weekly with twenty-four hours on the 156,000 miles of improved road in the United States.

The cost of operation would not exceed twenty cents per mile per truck. On such a basis the cost per annum would be $19,531,200. The earnings of each truck would exceed $70 per week per day, or $14,175,000 per annum. This estimate is based on the present rate of postage and the earnings of the 94-ton trucks now in operation in exactly this type of service.

CARRIED TWO TONS.

The truck used on the special test run from Lancaster to New York was an Autocar that has been making daily trips from the Ardmore Postoffice for the past two months. It was driven by the regular postal department driver. The truck was carried, in addition to the driver, a checker and 1,920 pounds of mail. The total distance covered in miles was covered with twenty gallons of gasoline.

The run was made through the actual traffic conditions, passing through the start of the business districts of all towns and cities on the route between Lancaster and Philadelphia and from Philadelphia to the Twenty-third street ferry wharf in Jersey City, from there to the Thirty-third street postoffice in New York city.

DR. LESLIE TO SPEAK AT FINAL Y. M. C. A. MEETING

The last of the series of men's meetings at the Cambridge Y. M. C. A. will be held tomorrow at 4 p. m. Dr. Elmer A. Leslie, pastor of the Epworth Methodist Episcopal Church, will be the speaker. His subject will be "Men of the Burning Heart." Miss Ruth Tisch will have charge of the musical program.

SPECIAL COURT TO TRY MEN IN SERVICE

A special session of the Municipal Court of the City of Boston for the sole purpose of handling all civil cases arising in this district where dependents and families under the new Soldiers and Sailors Civil Rights Act will be started in the courthouse Monday.

The court, which will sit daily, will be held in the third session of the Municipal Civil Court and all judges of the Municipal Court will preside in turn.

This court is the first court of its kind established in the United States since the act was approved on March 8.

Under its provisions all civil cases concerning men in any branch of the service of the country, their dependents and families are protected for the duration of the war and six months afterward. Both actions which would endanger their homes, money and property from creditors and persons who might bring civil action during the absence of the men.

The law provides that no judgment against the men must be given a hearing before a court before a final decision can be made. Thus landlords cannot evict the families of the men who are their tenants, instalment houses cannot take furniture and other goods bought prior to the man's entrance into the service, and insurance companies are forbidden to consider unpaid premiums on policies of men in the service as lapsed without having a hearing. The penalty for violation of the act is a $1,000 fine, a year in jail or both.

The judges have also issued a proclamation to members of the bar in Boston asking that they volunteer their services to defend actions brought against men in the service and their families.

United States officials when informed of the new court expressed great satisfaction and are contemplating suggesting the same idea to all the large cities in the country.

CARDINAL WILL BLESS PALMS TOMORROW

Tomorrow, Palm Sunday, Cardinal O'Connell will preside at the first of the Holy Week services he is to conduct at Holy Cross Cathedral.

The order of services in the Cathedral during Holy Week, one of the most solemn periods of the ecclesiastical year, is announced as follows:

Palm Sunday, 10 a. m.—Blessing of the palms by the cardinal, to be followed by a procession and the distribution of the palms; solemn high mass, at which the Passion will be sung, will follow.

Wednesday, 5 p. m.—The Office of Tenebrae will be chanted by students of St. John's Seminary. The lamentations will be sung by the clergy of the Cathedral. The cardinal will preside.

Holy Thursday, 7:30—The Office of the Tenebrae will be chanted.

Good Friday, 1:30 p. m.—Office of the Tenebrae and sermon on the Passion. Veneration of the Cross will take place at the end of the service.

Holy Saturday morning the Cardinal will bless the holy oils to be used during the year. He will then celebrate solemn pontifical mass. After the mass the solemn procession of the blessed sacrament to the repository in the Chapel of the Blessed Sacrament will take place.

WOMEN DARE TO REVOLT?

Would the women of war-ridden Germany dare:

To revolt,

To smash the Kaiser,

To arm themselves against further torture, shame and debasement?

Gertrude Atherton prophesies that they would.

She makes this prophecy in "The White Morning." This is the name of her latest novel, which will be published daily in the Boston AMERICAN, beginning next Monday, March 25.

Mrs. Atherton presents her revolutionary vision through the wonderful personality of the Countess Olenyn von Niebuhr, daughter of the Junkers.

The countess is a beautiful woman, a dominant magnet, endowed with tremendous possibilities for loving.

Through her Norman-Saxon touch of her own Junker class, is in itself a story of surpassing interest.

Through the countess runs the thread of the suffering of German women, and the story leads up to all leading to the dawn of "The White Morning."

Watch for the opening instalment on March 25, for the story leaps into action at the start.

REMODELLED PIER THEATRE READY

Messrs. Webster and Snow House Experts, Complete Task

By Paul Whelten.

Aboard the Receiving Ship, Commonwealth Pier, March 23.—"Ralph" Webster and "Homer" M. Snow, the two knights of the paint pot and brush aboard the receiving ship, have completed their task of remodeling the stage and setting of "Seaside Theatre," after four weeks of painstaking labor.

The entire scenery and immediate surroundings are those of a (a is Joe Urban) in brilliant blue and gold, with plenty of peacock effect. "Tearers" and "tonsorators" have been added to the sets, making real wings to shelter the performers while they wait to go on.

The stage of "Seaside Theatre" aboard the receiving ship was built from the floor of the main deck to the top flys, including the place for, by Webster last August, and since that time has been used to stage the many entertainments that have taken place on the pier. In November the color scheme of the stage was designed by Snow, and the two tars in their spare time made the place look like a real theatre.

They did not like it in its old form, however, and a month ago mapped out a different design. This they have been working on in the time they would ordinarily have for recreation. The fact that the structure, for the most part, is of canvas, instead of wood and permanent walls, made their work very difficult, and they were in imminent danger of spattering themselves all over the concrete floor, so shaky are their painting scaffolding.

The two scenic artists have finished their task and now considered, would cost in the neighborhood of $700, and they were forced to be exceedingly economical.

GAURD AGAINST MISHAPS DURING GUN FIRE

Devens Authorities Issue Order Warning Traffic Within Firing Zone

By William Flynn.

Camp Devens, Ayer, March 23.—Precautions are being taken here to prevent anyone from being injured during the artillery practice which is scheduled to take place on the range on Monday morning.

An official order has been issued warning all persons to keep out of the danger zone while the firing is in progress. Roads traversing the range will be closed to traffic and mounted guards will patrol the limits of the zone. The order says in part:

"It is contemplated that target practice for the artillery will begin at this cantonment on March 25. The unsafe areas containing targets for the present lie between the Nashua River and a north and south line running through Spectacle Pond. No firing will be done before 7:30 a. m. or after 11:30 a. m. and none on Sundays. Range guards will be provided.

"All persons are warned to keep out of this danger space during the firing."

"Boston's Own" has started its British hikes and combat maneuvering will be a daily feature of the training of soldiers at this cantonment during the next few months. The members of G Company of the 301st Infantry took a hike of 20 miles and cooked their first Spring meal to the open.

They were supposed to intercept and dispense an enemy outfit marching north on Ayer Junction to cut the line of communication of the troops at that cantonment, and the men enjoyed the novelty of the experience.

Plans have been made to equip fifty more wells at this cantonment to increase the water supply, which has been declared to be inadequate.

AIDING THE ENEMY

EDITORIAL

The 25-mile ten-man relay race to be conducted by the Boston Athletic Association on April 19, in place of the annual Marathon run, should bring together the greatest galaxy of distance runners ever gathered together in the same race in this country.

The race is confined to men in the service, but the army and navy at the present time contain most of the great present-day runners, and there will probably be a host of teams entered from all parts of the country. Many of the spectacular features of past years will be missing, but these should be more than made up by the military and naval display.

It will be a great battle for supremacy between the army and navy, and the men will run in service uniform.

Among the Boys at Devens

Two second lieutenants were hurrying through the cantonment in the dark one night recently, and they passed a soldier who failed to salute. Both wheeled and, as if they had rehearsed it, shouted together, "What's the matter with your arm?" The soldier stopped and returned to attention. The lights of an automobile shone upon the insignia of a colonel, and two young Philadelphians nearly fainted as they stammered their apologies and saluted themselves.

The men in the Remount Depot claim they are the healthiest set of men in the cantonment, and point with pride to the fact that there have only been three cases of measles and one of pneumonia among the 200 men in their outfit this Winter. They only have been seven suffering from minor ailments at the present time.

AYER PRIVATE GETS 15 YEARS AT LABOR

John J. Casey Found Guilty of Discourtesy and Refusing to Obey

By William Flynn.

Camp Devens, Ayer, March 22.—Private John J. Casey, a member of Battery A, 301st Field Artillery, has been sentenced to fifteen years at hard labor and taken to Fort Jay, N. Y., for speaking disrespectfully to an officer and for refusing to obey a command.

Casey, who was formerly a motorman in Lynn, pleaded guilty to the first charge, not guilty to the second, but was found guilty on both. He told Lieutenant Dunbar Lockwood that he did not care what they made him do and when ordered to do fatigue work he refused.

Major John J. Dowling, formerly superintendent of the Boston City Hospital, and Major Franklin G. Balch of the Massachusetts General Hospital staff are taking a course in military procedure at the base hospital. Major Dowling is to command a unit that is yet to be formed, and a similar assignment is expected for Major Balch.

Patients discharged from the base hospital are prohibited from walking to their quarters therefrom. The latest orders state they must be taken in motor ambulances. The new rule was adopted for two reasons. One was to avoid protests on the part of relatives and the other was to give the various ambulance units practical experience in the handling of men.

Patients are discharged from the hospital twice a day. A list of the men and their destinations is turned over to the orderly in charge of each ambulance, and he is instructed to see that each of the men is delivered at the place designated in his orders.

These orders are similar to those the orderlies will receive when handling men in the trenches of France.

COL. SPRAGUE, EDUCATOR, WAR HERO, DEAD

Raised 2 Companies for Union, Honored for Bravery; Ancestor Founder of Charlestown

Colonel Homer B. Sprague, Civil War hero, educator, lecturer, author and peace advocate, died at the age of 83 today at Vernon Court Hotel in Newton, where he lived.

He was born at Weston, a direct descendant of William Sprague of Dorchester, England, who was one of the founders of Charlestown and of Hingham.

He was graduated from Yale in 1852 and attended Yale Law School. He was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1854. The same year he married Antoinette E. Pardee of New Haven, who died January 29, 1911.

He began the practice of law in Worcester, then was principal of Worcester High School from 1855 to 1859, moved to New Haven and was back in law practice again when the Civil War came.

He raised two companies, and was not mustered out until '65. He was a brave and efficient officer. He was wounded at Irish Bend, La., took part in two "forlorn hopes," was breveted colonel for gallantry at Port Hudson, was taken prisoner at Winchester, and came out of the war with commission of colonel of the 11th C. D. A.

After the war Colonel Sprague gave most of his energies to the educational field, in which he acquired more and more prominence.

Among the positions he held were: Professor of rhetoric and English literature at Cornell, 1868-70; headmaster Boston Girls' High School, 1875-85; founded Martha's Vineyard Summer Institute, 1878; president Mills College, California, 1885-86; President University of North Dakota, 1887-91; president American Institute of Instruction, 1893-95; founder of Boston Watch and Ward Society, charter member American and Massachusetts Peace Societies.

He wrote extensively on educational, political and social purity topics.

UNDERGOES SURGERY TO FIGHT FOR ARMY

So that he will be physically fit to join the Royal Flying Corps, LeRoy D. McLellan of No. 41 Munroe street, Roxbury, will enter the City Hospital on Monday to undergo a severe operation. At the end of a month he hopes to be able to appear before the medical board at the British and Canadian Recruiting Mission Headquarters, No. 44 Bromfield street, and if it is found he is unfit he will be sent to Toronto via the New York headquarters of the corps.

Two men from Lynn, Roland March, of No. 23 Nelson street, and Fred Richmond, LaTerre, enlisted for service in the Canadian army at the mission headquarters.

WILSON CATCHES COLD WHILE PLAYING GOLF

Washington, March 23.—President Wilson developed an acute bronchial cold while playing golf, which necessitated calling off the Friday cabinet meeting. Several callers were received at the executive mansion, but Dr. Grayson prevailed against the cabinet meeting on the ground that the President might use his voice more than was advisable.

HOT TAR FOR 4; KISS FLAG

Disloyal Remarks to the U. S. Stir Illinois Mob to Action

By International News Service.

Christopher, Ill., March 23.—Indignation against disloyal remarks said to have been made against the government and President Wilson resulted in four men being tarred and feathered and forced to kiss the American flag here early today by a mob of more than 200 persons.

Shortly after the tarring and feathering of Theodore Kunger, a grocer, arrested for disloyal remarks, who had been dragged from jail with Henry Ten Broeck and Herman Wheeler, the same treatment was administered the Rev. John Kovalsky, pastor of the Polish Catholic Church.

Father Kovalsky was led to the public square where the other three men had been tortured. While the kettle of tar was being heated, two flags were handed the pastor and he was compelled to kiss them.

Father Kovalsky was disrobed to the waist while two of the crowd poured buckets of hot tar over his body. He offered no resistance. Feathers were then scattered over him.

The priest was then sent home with a warning to be more loyal in the future.

W. R. Jones of Benton, Ill., lawyer for Kunger, who had said he would ask for a new trial, was warned by citizens to leave the town.

He began walking down the railroad tracks to Benton and had reached Urbain when he was overtaken by an automobile filled with men. He was taken back to Christopher and in the public square was compelled to kiss the flag, then parade up and down the street and praise the President. After this Jones was told to leave the city and not to return. He left immediately.

TRIO OF STARS WILL SPEAK ON SUFFRAGE

The announcement that Miss Mabel Vernon, the "silver-tongued orator" of the National Woman's Party, is to be the third speaker at the Dudley Street Opera House meeting in Park Square Theatre tomorrow afternoon, completes the list of orators who will put forth the claims of the Woman's Party and the advantages of the Federal amendment.

The taking of the headquarters of the two elaborate Massachusetts Senators, Lodge and Weeks, is the object of this first big drive, backed by the determination that victory shall ultimately perch upon the purple, gold and white banners of the National Woman's party.

Dudley Field Malone, Miss Anne Martin and Miss Mabel Vernon constitute the invincible trio that will hurl their suffrage arguments at the audience.

170 AMERICANS ARE HELD IN GERMANY

Spanish Embassy Forwards List to U. S. State Department

By International News Service.

Washington, March 23.—The names of all Americans either held as prisoners of war or interned by Germany were received by the State Department today, through the Spanish embassy at Berlin.

The list, which contains about 170 names, is the first to be forwarded by the German government, although the United States has made periodical reports of German subjects held here under similar circumstances. The names will be made public, probably next week.

Despairing of receiving any report, the War Department had compiled a list of missing Americans who probably were held in Germany. On checking today, it was found that all the names on the list compiled here were in the list received from Berlin, and that there were three additional names on the latter.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the Tablets a few nights.

To change the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel. There's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe, instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with "a dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result.

Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.—Advertisement.

POOL ALL FUNDS IN RAILROADS' TREASURIES

Director McAdoo Creates Vast War Chest for Facilitating Handling of Traffic

By International News Service.

Washington, March 23.—A vast railway war chest is to be created as the result of a revolutionary order issued today by Railway Director McAdoo. The order provides that all cash, demand loans and deposits and time drafts and deposits appearing on the companies' books at the close of business December 31, 1917, were for railway purposes, and therefore subject to the control and audit of the director general.

The effect of this order will be to place at the disposal of the director general vast balances to be used for the unification and mobilization of the lines under federal control. Large sums may be shifted from one company for the use of another by simply making a bookkeeping entry of the transaction.

"Full accounting for the protection of the companies' rights will be made," the order makes it clear, when the affairs are found to be advisable. Also, the director-general will entertain any applications from companies who may desire to show that any of the funds on hand December 31 were not for railway purposes and therefore not under his control.

The order provides that the funds on hand at the close of business December 31 can be expended by the railways only for the payment of interest accruing up to July 31, 1918; payment of dividends not to exceed the regular rate during the three years ended June 30, 1917; and for material and supplies for railway use and other expenses of operation and the taxes.

GAY GIRL OF 12 IS DARING "RAFFLES"

Providence, March 23.—A twelve-year-old girl was taken before the Juvenile Court today as the burglar who has baffled the police for the past three months with a string of burglaries in the down town district. She is said to take from the middle-aged adults who taught her burglary, like to go out and steal.

Captain James A. Coughlan, who made the arrest, said that the girl, six skeleton keys on the girl and two watches and marriage rings and bracelets. The captain declared that the child admitted being the South Hill burglar. Captain Coughlan recommended to the court that she be committed to the Oakhaven School for Wayward Girls.

16 ARTILLERY PLANTS NEAR COMPLETION

2 Billion Dollars Being Spent for the Manufacture of Mobile Cannon

By International News Service.

Washington, March 23.—The establishment of sixteen large plants for the manufacture of mobile artillery cannon and a vast program calling for an expenditure of approximately two billion dollars, summarizes the work of the sub division of the Division of Ordnance, the War Department announced today.

"These plants," the statement says, are well under way and a number are practically complete."

The announcement states that the full capacity of the country for the manufacture of powder and explosives has been taxed and that many new plants have been constructed, practically doubling the output.

Since the beginning of the war the personnel of the gun division has increased from three officers and seven civilians to approximately 200 officers and 1,000 civilians. By June it is estimated there will be 1,500 officers and more than 10,000 civilians in the division.

The major projects of the gun division have included: Construction of the Watervliet arsenal, with a capacity of approximately $18,000,000 for the manufacture of mobile artillery; construction of the Rock Island arsenal with an annual capacity of $10,000,000 and the construction of twelve new plants with an annual capacity of $1,000,000 and the addition of five others, about doubling the present capacity of the arsenals.

NEW WAR PLAY AT SHUBERT MONDAY

Max Marcin, who wrote "Cheating Cheaters," and Leon A. Ascher, who is the author of "The Unchastened Woman," among other productive talents to ground, have made a "go of it jointly," at the moment, which is the only new play to venture into Boston Holy week.

I am informed that "The Rape of Belgium" might be signed undertaker. If it were not for the fact that events abroad prove that the incidents therein are common everyday occurrences. Still, neither the authors nor the star, John Mason, have any objection to the term, mentioned.

Mr. Mason, who has been rehearsing here for several days, and who is one of the most popular actors who comes in this city, especially with the old-time theatregoer, declares that the period is passed when the term could be used in any contemptuous sense.

"Take the long list of successes at the Boston Museum which in its day was the greatest of all temples of the drama in America, most of them were melodramas. Boucicault, whose plays made more money for him than was earned by any other playwright of the day, wrote nothing but melodrama. The early plays of Henry Arthur Jones, Pinero and even J. M. Barrie were all melodramatic.

"It was the advent of cheap companies which lumped with the lowest grade of players and gave performances at ten, twenty and thirty cents which brought about the name. But they have passed and people do not hesitate to prefer the so-called strong play which is just melodrama. That's why 'The Rape of Belgium' ought to be a hit. It is fine melodrama of the highest type."

Propaganda Play

If Holy Week is dull Easter week brings a bewildering array of attractions. The production at the Majestic of "Getting Together" is something quite beyond the sphere of the ordinary theatre. It is a propaganda play under the auspices of the American, British and Canadian governments. Although it might have stayed a season in New York, the purpose is to send it all over the country, stopping only a week or two in each city of importance.

In the cast are Blanche Bates and Holbrook Blinn, Percival Knight and a company of seventy. The authors are Ian Hay, J. Hastings Macnaers, Percival Knight and Harry B. Smith.

The piece is in three acts and seven scenes, showing the battle front and a ruined village in France. A British Tank is used in the performance and to parade the streets, and a motion picture of an actual battle, owned by the British War Office, will be shown. Those who have seen "Getting Together" say that it is a very good play entirely aside from its patriotic character.

Leo Looks Like Patrick

Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore has been dead a quarter of a century or more. He was the greatest band leader of his day and one of the best showmen in the music world. It was talmore who created the great Peace Jubilee in Boston after the Civil War. He was the genius who led his great band past the reviewing stand where President Cleveland was watching a big parade and instead of playing "Hail to the Chief" as all other bands did, struck into "He's Going to Marry Yum Yum."

As the President was engaged to be married to a young and pretty girl this bit of impertinence from "The Mikado," convulsed the nations for several days.

Well, Leo Ditrichstein in his uniform as the King of some unnamed Latin country in "The King," looks exactly like the portraits of Gilmore, which only goes to show that Gilmore probably copied the favorite uniform of the King of Spain or Portugal to wear at the head of his band.

I'm informed that "The King" is a frisky sort of affair, a farcical comedy which has been translated without palliation, and which is only excusable because it is so genuinely funny and so skilfully and delicately doke.

Why George Quit Work.

Cohan and Harris, who are sending "The King" to the Tremont, are also opening a short season of the latest Cohan production, The Cohanissaire, Easter Monday night. This is the third of a series of revues by George M. Cohan, the first being a revue by Irving Berlin to help him with the music. People wonder why George doesn't appear in person in these revues, and their box office value would be enhanced without a doubt if he would do so.

But supposing you had made a million or two, and had a lot of shows out coining for you, and no matter how hard you worked during your waking hours to spend it your income kept gaining on you, don't you think you would rebel at the drudgery of changing clothes half a dozen times an evening, covering your countenance with grease paint, and singing a lot of silly songs over and over, and doing meaningless dances and rapping the floor with your little cane. Certainly. Well, that's the way George feels.

Chicken a la Jolson.

The overwhelming success of the popularity of Al Jolson caused Jack Norworth, whose revue, "Odds and Ends," has been very prosperous at the Majestic, to tell about his experiences in selecting:

"I used to work in burnt cork," he explained, "and I stuck to it for years. I got to be a vaudeville headliner in black face and I joined the minstrels because I felt that it was an outdoor, a human wall, that real entertainment would never stand for burnt cork and if I wanted to succeed on the legit I would have to wash.

"And right after I had gone at and was doing my work in white face along comes Al Jolson and proves that audiences of the very best class will accept the cork. Jolson can play with anyone he wants to. And he's the real American comedian. When I came back to this country after three years in England, during two and a half of which the country was at war, there were two things I wanted, fried chicken Maryland, and to hear Al Jolson.

T. R. Says O. K.

"The Country Cousin," which succeeds "Hamilton" at the Hollis, in addition to having two of the most distinguished writers in the country as authors, Booth Tarkington and Julian Street, and one of the prettiest actresses, Alexandra Carlisle as the star, has a letter of recommendation from T. Roosevelt, who declares, "this is a first class American play." T. R. attended the opening, made a speech from the box and told the audience that he heartily commended its sentiments. The play deals with the first few months after our entrance into the war.

George or Alex?

Mrs. George Arliss plays Betsy, the wife of Alexander Hamilton in "Hamilton" at the Hollis. Thus she has the same husband on the stage as off. "I consider it an ideal arrangement," said Mrs. Arliss, but it is truly a rare combination. One of the hardships of the acting profession is the necessary separation of husband and wife for such long terms each season.

"That's where the immense expanse of America works hardship. And American managers frown upon husbands and wives belonging to the same touring company. That slams a double door in the face of Cupid. Fortunately in England it is far more common for married couples to appear in the same company, and even when they are traveling with different troupes they may meet frequently because of the comparatively small area of the country.

"People often ask me if I do not sometimes inadvertently make a mental slip by addressing Alexander as George or George as Alexander. I have to watch myself very carefully on the stage or I might mix the names.

Miss Makes Mark.

The first time I ever saw the name of Max Marcin was in a short story which was obviously inspired by the success of Montague Glass's sketches of that class and school of humor. Ordinarily a writer who imitates somebody else gets away with a few and proves into oblivion. Max Marcin, however, showed a knack of copying and developed a style and vein of his own.

He has been exceedingly active since he broke into the show business a couple of seasons ago. He distinguished himself by having two shows opening the same night about a year ago. He has not only written plays himself, but he has adapted them, rewritten them as in the case of "Seven Days" Leave," and collaborated, as in "The Rape of Belgium."

In "Cheating Cheaters," he concerned the idea of two bands of wily crooks, each deceived into believing the other crowd respectable. It is the habit of certain critics to think there are only a limited number of possible situations; that everything else is a variation of one of these situations, and that knowing the fundamentals, nothing could possibly surprise them. It seems to me that Mr. Marcin has conceived situations that would surprise anybody who hadn't been tipped off. It is one of the most ingeniously contrived plays I have ever seen.

Sweet Seventeen.

A young girl of my acquaintance, aetat. seventeen, went to see "The Man Who Came Back." Curious to know what effect such a drama would have on such a mind I asked her about it.

"I was very much interested in the opium scene," she said. "What is the effect of opium on people? Does it make them drunk or just make them sleepy? They all appeared to be miserable in the play. If it makes them miserable, why do they take it? And why should they go to such dirty, bad smelling places to take opium. Why don't they just buy it and take it home with them? What does it look like? The stage was dark, and I couldn't see very well—"

"Hold on," I exclaimed. "Write out all your questions, and I'll mail them to William A. Brady. What else did you like?"

"Well, I was very much attracted to that poor young man. He seemed to need a woman's guidance, and I am not sure that girl in the play would have the right influence. He had nice hair and eyes, and if he did drink too much it was not his fault—"

I took that record right off. One more conquest for Hero Hall.

How's Your Second Act?

Jack Hazzard of "Springtime," coauthor of "Turn to the Right," is at work on another play. He says he has a pretty good first act but he needs rest and contemplation before he goes any further. "A touring playwright can't be a success," declares Hazzard. "A scene written in a hotel parlor, another scribbled in a dry goods box, and a third on a rickety table in a cold chamber won't combine to make a happy act.

"So I'm going to wait until the season is over and I can get away quietly and work steadily."

When the Audience Growls.

I don't think most of us understand how real the people in pictures are to the average movie audience until something turns up like "The Kaiser—The Beast of Berlin." When they show close-ups of the Kaiser gnashing his teeth and regularing hate, the audience growls and snarls back at him like a baseball crowd at an umpire or an angry mob at a squad of police.

Twenty-four Years New.

How time flies. We still talk of B. F. Keith's New Theatre, yet it is twenty-four years Monday since the vaudeville house opened its doors. Perhaps the reason the "New" has stuck is that Bob Larson keeps the house looking like new. It is as spic and span today as the day it was first opened.

TREMONT TEMPLE COURSE

For the extra concert of the Tremont Temple Course which will occur Wednesday evening, April 3, Mme. Evelyn Scotney, soprano, and Howard White, bass baritone, will return and with them Giovanni Zorga, tenor, and Jean Gilbert, flutist. The accompanist will be Herbert Seller. The program will consist of an attractive blend of operatic airs, songs in English and Scottish folk songs. The trio from "Faust," duet from "Carmen," and arias from "Sicilian Vespers," "Pearl of Brazil," "Pagliacci" and other operas are on the program. An unusual feature will be the reading from Service's "Rhymes of a Red Cross Man" by Howard White.

SHUBERT THEATRE

"The Rape of Belgium," a new drama of the present great war, by Max Marcin and Louis K. Anspacher, will open a limited engagement at the Shubert Theatre next Monday evening, being presented by A. H. Woods.

The drama is said to be intensely melodramatic in treatment throughout its three acts. The scenes are laid in a French chateau, which is occupied by the Germans. Three women, the mistress of the chateau, the American wife of a distinguished Frenchman, now a general in the French army, and her young sister, are compelled by the occupiers to remain in their former home and minister to their wants.

Conditions are intensified by the capture by the Germans of a young American aviator, who proves to be the fiance of the young sister, and it is from here that the action widens has been fast. Hitherto quickness to surprising swiftness. The rapidity and turn of events ensuing being productive of intense thrills.

Of the leading members, John Mason, probably the best known of the actors to Bostonians, will have a striking role that calls for his remarkable acting ability to give full display, and Conway Tearle, only little less prominent than Mr. Mason, will carry a leading role, together with Olive Wyndham, Malcolm Williams and others.

Scenically, the production has been effectively invested with fitting sets.

WALDRON'S CASINO

Joe Hurtig has produced many a good show during his burlesque career but his new offering this season in "Hello America," which will be seen at Waldron's Casino on Monday, is so far above anything that he has ever attempted in the past that it really stands in a class by itself. Elaborate new scenery and wonderful new musical numbers; new is submitted on everything of this great show and a laugh is guaranteed every second, which will not be doubted when it is known that the "Two Sams," Lewis and Dody, are the principal comedians with the show. They have never been seen in burlesque before this everything else new, but they have a world-wide reputation in vaudeville as the Jew and Italian and considered kings of all funmakers, and have been top notch headliners for years. Then there will be that clever little soubrette, that dancing demon, Pretty little Miss Primrose Semon, right along with them, also Kitty Gilascone, the girl with a singing voice that makes you sit up and listen, and Ina Hayward, Frank Wakefield, Arthur Conrad, reveals remarkably big enthusiasm and capability for his work, his efforts to help his fellow immigrants and others to gain a foothold on the road to prosperity.

All the Henry Jewett Players will appear in the cast of "The Melting Pot" at the Copley Theatre, and the play will be staged under the personal direction of Mr. Jewett.

GAYETY THEATRE

Next week's attraction at the Gayety Theatre will be Joe Hurtig's latest and best offering, "The Social Maids," headed by George Stone and Etta Pillard, than whom the burlesque chorean art has no more finished exponents. Mr. Hurtig in equipping this production has excelled all his previous efforts, and the result is one of the most beautiful productions the big burlesque wheel will be able to offer its patrons this season, both as masters of the modern art of dancing and as artists in the line of clean, appealing, delightful comedy, and with the support Mr. Hurtig has provided in the persons of Willie Barrows, Sam Wright, Teddy Dupont, Lew Murray, Marty Seamon, Zara Howard and Jessie Hiatt, they give a performance of the musical burlesque, "The Boys From Home," which is worthy of the best that Broadway is offering its habitues. Leon Herz wrote the book of the burlesque, and Will H. Vodery composed the special music.

CICCOLINI CONCERT

A week from tomorrow afternoon at the Boston Opera House Guido Ciccolini, the young Italian tenor whose voice began to excite the musical public of Europe when the great war started, will be heard in a notable concert. If the sudden deluge of battle had not plunged Europe into the maelstrom of war in 1914, Ciccolini's name would, no doubt, have risen high.

For the most successful and extended grand opera tour of her brilliant career Mme. Melba, given her choice of all the available living tenors, chose young Guido Ciccolini, saying: "He is the ideal tenor. I would rather hear him sing than any tenor in the world."

The sale of seats opens at C. C. Harvey Co., warehouse, No. 144 Boylston street, next Thursday morning.

COPLEY THEATRE

At the Copley Theatre next week, beginning Monday evening, Boston playgoers will see one of the most striking and famous plays of the present epoch. It is entitled "The Melting Pot," and it is the work of Israel Zangwill, one of the leaders among the present-day Jewish writers.

"The Melting Pot," which will be acted at the Copley by the Henry Jewett Players, tells an entertaining and significant story of events in the life of a young Jewish immigrant to this country. He lands at Ellis Island, where comes many thousands of people every year to this country, and after leaving there he engages in settlement work on the East Side of New York. The plot

JOHN CASEY, PICTURE CENSOR

Mr. John M. Casey, the amusement censor of Boston, connected with the mayor's office of this city, has held that position for years, and is perhaps one of the best-known censors throughout the country, being a member of the National Board of Censorship, to whom every manufacturer and producer must look to have their pictures approved before they are released to the exhibitor, and shown to the public. Mr. Casey is not only the motion picture censor, but he also belongs to the Exhibitors' Association, so he is kept in close touch with the exhibitor as well as the producer. This has helped to make Mr. Casey the success he has attained in his present position along motion picture lines. Each week since Manager Thos. D. Soriero took charge of the Park Theatre Mr. Casey has followed the programs closely, and he states he finds only the highest quality pictures at the Park. The programs are always a combine of educational features, photoplays with a heavy interest and features full of action. They are diversified with comedies that are invariably clean.

A MANAGER'S TRIBUTE

Boston, March 23, 1918.

To my friends, acquaintances and to the theatre-going public of Boston:

I beg to take this opportunity to express my personal and enthusiastic endorsement of Mr. A. H. Woods' production of "Cheating Cheaters," which I sincerely believe will prove a delightful evening's entertainment to anybody who might anticipate seeing it. The confidence of my assertion is amply substantiated by the unanimous praise showered upon this original play by Mr. Parker of the Transcript, Mr. Hale of the Herald, Mr. Howard of the Globe, Mr. Crosby of the Post, Mr. Walsh of the Traveler, Mr. McIsaac of the American, Mr. Harkins of the Advertiser, and Mr. Clark of the Record.

In the many years of my theatrical experiences I have made but one other public appeal, this being when I recommended "Under Cover" to the amusement-seekers of New England. This piece, you will recall, established the longest run in the theatrical history of Boston. I honestly believe that Max Marcin, author of "Cheating Cheaters," has constructed a play that for thrills, laughs and surprises is far superior to "Under Cover," and one which I believe will bring even the most critical playgoer the utmost satisfaction. You have my personal guarantee for this.

With best wishes and many thanks for all past favors, I am,

Respectfully, FRED E. WRIGHT,
Manager, Park Sq. Theatre.

P. S.—Send your mail order (enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope) direct to me, and I will give it my personal attention.

GERARD ROLE PLAYED BY GIRARD

One o the most remarkable characterizations in the sensational photoplay, "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," which is attracting immense crowds to the Globe Theatre, is that of the former American Ambassador to the imperial household in Berlin, James W. Gerard. Another rather singular feature is the fact that the role is played by a namesake of the former Ambassador, who bears a striking resemblance both in size and facial expression. When Rupert Julian, who plays the part of the deposed German Emperor, engaged Joseph Girard to play this role he at once saw the remarkable similarity and immediately instructed his camera men to make as many of the "close,ups" as possible. The similarity is even more pronounced when these close-ups are thrown upon the screen. In fact, so decided is the resemblance that many of the theatre managers, familiar with the tricks utilized in the filming of photo productions, declare that if it was the Ambassador himself shown in some of the news pictorials and attached to the film. This, however, is not so, as the scenes are those in which the Ambassador is surrounded by many others who were present in the imperial household in Berlin when Mr. Gerard presented the communication from our government immediately after the Lusitania met her unfortunate fate. This impersonation, coupled with that of the Kaiser, played by Rupert Julian, are beyond criticism, and are well worth the price of admission to see.

ORPHEUM THEATRE

The leading act at Lowe's Orpheum the first half of the week will be that of Sansel and Leonhard, favorites in the musical comedy field, who have been prominent in the casts of "Flora Bella" and "Good Night Paul," and will present a variety of singing numbers accompanied by Don Mathews at the piano. Others in the bill will be Saxton and Farrell, presenting their skit of theatrical life, "The Troubles of An Actress"; Burray Benn & In a comedy monologue, and the Dancing Kennedys, in a series of original dance conceptions of the whirlwind order. On the screen there will be shown the latest News Pictorial, a new Mack Sennett comedy and the photoplay, "Naughty, Naughty," picturing Enid Bennett as a girl of a quiet country town who goes to the metropolis and there acquires advanced urban ideas, which upon her return to her home she tries to introduce to the bucolic natives. This she does with surprising success, and the natives realize that there is more to life than gloomy prospecting. Many of the things the girl does shock the sanctimonious of her neighbors, which gives rise to the oft-quoted expression that makes for the title of the photoplay. The Thursday change of bill will bring as ...mdiner the musical comedy in two scenes entitled "The You Devil," played by Clay Crouch and company of ten people.

PARK THEATRE

Manager Soriero offers an excellent bill at the Park Theatre this week, headed by Earl Williams in "An American Live Wire." This picture is based upon one of O. Henry's stories. It deals with a Yankee in a South American republic, and it is full of lively situations while a pretty love story runs through it.

In "Broakers Ahead," Viola Dana has a part which fits her winsome personality like a glove. It is a tale of sea-faring people. Ruth, a waif of the sea, is involved in strange adventures. She appears as a child of ten and in varying ages to ripe womanhood. A Charlie Chaplin playlet is sure to please. There is also a Sidney Drew comedy, the Pathe news-reel, and Henry Kelly, singer.

The Sunday night concert includes Marguerite Clark in "Gretna Green," and Shirley Mason in "The Apple Tree Girl."

MODERN AND BEACON THEATRES

The second screen venture of Mary Garden will be given its first Boston showings throughout the week at the Modern Theatre, where she will be seen pictured in a modern story, "The Splendid Sinner." Any venture of Miss Garden's may be reckoned as possessing a superior quality of artistry invested through her very presence, and there is augured in the announcements a stirring and meritorious cinema production. The story centres about a woman who has lived a full life, and who has met with every variety of lies, deceit, intrigue and passions from the masculine half of her world. There comes to her a man who in truth and trustfulness loves her for herself alone, ignorant the while of her past history. When the revealment comes to him, his horror sends him away in revulsion of sentiment and bitterness. But she, showing the higher qualities of her nature, performs a splendid act of heroism that wins back the love that had turned from her.

BACH'S PASSION MUSIC

In many respects the most important event in the season of music will be the performance in Symphony Hall next Tuesday, March 26th, of Bach's "St. Matthew Passion." The management announces that owing to the very large demand for tickets the performance will be repeated under exactly the same conditions and with the same cast the following week, on Tuesday, April 2. For the vast majority of persons interested in music, in art and choral music in particular, the performances next week and the following Tuesday will be their first opportunities to hear the "St. Matthew Passion" in its entirety.

Bach's "St. Matthew Passion" covers the traditional three hours. To listen to this music without break would be too great a strain on any audience, and as the work is divided into two parts it has been decided to give both concerts in two sessions. The first session will begin at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and, with the choir that always occur, will run about an hour and three-quarters. Then will come an intermission, with which the second session will be given, which will run about an hour and a half.

FENWAY THEATRE

"The Song of Songs," featuring Elsie Ferguson in a role of great appeal, heads the bill at the Fenway on the first three days of the coming week. The artistic interpretation of the role by Miss Ferguson, together with a story of strong appeal that makes this production one of the strongest of the season. Doubtless many will recognize the "Song of Songs" as the production staged at the Tremont Theatre the early part of last season, when it was received with great acclaim.

On the same program Dorothy Dalton will be featured in her latest production, "Love Me," a most entertaining story beautifully staged and directed.

A CHINESE FESTIVAL

During the dramatic action of "The Whispering Chorus," which will be shown for the first times in Boston throughout the coming week at the Beacon Theatre, there was call in the interest of enhancement of the realism to lend truth a scene. It was requested to be a Chinese scene in a street in the heart of the Chinese city of Shanghai. The picturing of the scene was made during the Chinese New Year, and the director, Cecil B. de Mille, had arranged for a large crowd of holidaying Chinese to occupy the street he had built at the studio. Everything that was necessary for the proper celebration of this great Oriental feast was in evidence. The lights, music, food, and even a great lumbering dragon in myriad hues, spitting fire and steam, wound its devious way through the street, crowded by some three or four hundred almond-eyed aliens. As a spectacle it was a great success, and as a pleasureable event to the holidaying Orientals, it was a perfect occasion.

SISTERS IN NAUGHTY FILM

The stage and the studio boast many a pair of sisters who are devoted to each other, and who through each other's efforts or their own individual talent, secure fame and position. The latest of these are the Bennett sisters, Enid, now a well-known and popular star, and Marjorie, who is making her photo-dramatic debut with her big sister in "Naughty, Naughty," which will have its initial Boston showings at the orpheum Theatre the first half of next week. It should be said in justice, however, that Miss Marjorie Bennett is not a real tyro in the art, for as companion to her sister tonight many months of her screen career, she has often posed as "extra season" to help set scenes, studying the work the while. And her own merit is responsible for the rise in her good fortunes.

The Bennett sisters are natives of Australia, where they were educated. Enid, the elder, always had leanings toward the stage, and started her career with Katherine Grey, and later was with the allegorical play, "Everywoman." Fred Niblo and his wife, the late Josephine Cohan, sister to George Cohan, engaged her to play with their company, with which they were touring the Antipodes in the longer than usual engagement.

After this engagement she came to America via the Golden Gate, and was engaged for the motion pictures, to which she has devoted herself ever since. She is still a studious young woman, specializing in private life, vocal culture, and her chief recreation is horseback riding, though she loves all out door sports. In "Naughty, Naughty" she plays a charmingly humorous role—that of a small town girl who has visited New York and returns to bring her home town up to her own enlarged and modernized point of view

GLOBE THEATRE

"The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," is running into its second week at the big film favor at the Globe Theatre. The sentiieman of Potsdam, pictured in the photoplay built upon certain episodes regarding his private life and certain events leading up to the declaration of war that have until recently been veiled from the public mind, is revealed as most cordially hated in all lokens of verisimilitude through the sinoere and masterly assumption of the role by Rupert Julian. And it is not a disconcerted congestion of incidents that are pictured. Instead, there is a story running quickly and plausibly, the climax being led up to with fine approach and with consistent regard for the dramatic values. The scenes of battle are limited in number, there being no attempt to create a spectacular production. The interest of the photoplay lies in the drama, and there surely is enough of that to furnish many photoplays. The performance is continuous from 12:30 to 10:30 p. m.

ST. JAMES THEATRE

The vaudeville bill at Loew's St. James Theatre the first half of the week will be featured by a brace of headliners, "The Smart Shop," a musical comedy enlisting the services of ten people will be offered. This is announced as a sparkling offering with original book and music, special scenic setting and many changes of costumes. Sharing the leading honors will be Foley and O'Neil, two native Bostonians, and strong local favorites, in a breezy singing and comedy skit. Other acts on the bill include Elliott and Mora, in their comedy skit, "Married Life, Sometimes"; Charles H. Lawlor and Daughter, in a variety offering; Harry Tsuda, in a novelty act. On the screen there will be shown the latest News Pictorial, a comedy, and the photoplay, "Love Me," picturing Dorothy Dalton. The Thursday change of bill will bring "The Midnight Rollickers."

OPERA WEEK

Beginning Monday morning prospective patrons for the season of Grand Opera by the Metropolitan Opera Company, which opens April 22 at the Boston Opera House, may subscribe for either of two series of four performances each. Series A will include the following operas: "Le Prophete," in French, Monday evening, April 22, with Mmes. Matzenauer and Muzio and Messrs. Caruso, Mardones and Didur; conductor, Bodanzky. "Aida," in Italian, Wednesday afternoon, April 24, with Mmes. Muzio and Matzenauer and Messrs. Martinelli, Amato, Mardones and Rimini; Mr. Papi, conducting. "Boheme," in Italian, Friday evening, April 25, with Mmes. Easton, Howard and Mazzio and Messrs. Caruso, Amato, Scotti, Amato, Didur, Rossi, Laurenti; Mr. Moranzoni, conducting. "I Puritani," in Italian, on Saturday evening, April 26, with Mmes. Barrientos, Pertil and Mesars, Lazaro, De Luca and Giardinos; Mr. Moranzoni, will conduct. Series B will include the following operas: "Tosca," in Italian, Tuesday evening, April 23, with Farrar, Perini, Macnamack, Scotti, Rossi, Malatesta and Bada; Mr. Moranzoni, conducting. "Rigoletto" in Italian, Wednesday evening, April 24, with Mmes. Barrientos, Howard and Messrs. Lazaro, De Luca, Rothier; conductor, Papi. "Madame Butterfly," in Italian, Friday evening, April 25, with Farrar, Fornia, Carpi, Scotti, Ruysdael; conductor, Papi. "Samson et Dalila," in French, Saturday afternoon, April 26, with Mme. Claussen and Messrs. Caruso, Chalmers, Rothier; conductor, Monteux.

BOSTON THEATRE

"Even As You and I," the cinemasterpiece of the season and direct from its successful New York run, will be the feature film attraction at the Boston Theatre next week, and those French girls, the Amoros Sisters, will top the vaudeville bill offering a clever routine of songs, dances, mirth and physical culture demonstrations. A gripping portrayal of an extraordinary human interest is "Even As You and I," a big drama of south of the bay. The drama was written and produced by Lois Weber, authoress of "Jewel," "Hypocrites" and "Where Are Are My Children," and reveals all the finesse of the richer dramatic efforts of this gifted producer.

SUNDAY CONCERT AT THE HOLLIS

What promises to be one of the season's best Sunday entertainments will be given on Sunday evening, April 6, at the Hollis Street Theatre under the direction of Henry Taylor and Vincent Fetherston, two members of the executive staff of the theatre. They have been successful in presenting some unusual concerts in seasons past, and this year they promise several big surprises. The seats are on sale at the box office of the theatre.

PASSION PLAY

As a climax to the Lenten season, Tremont Temple will present this week the "Passion Play," in 8,000 feet of colored films, with a musical accompaniment by the Temple Quartet. Many beautiful organ effects, including a set of chime bells, which have recently been installed, will be given at each performance. The pictures will be given twice daily, at 2:15 and 8 o'clock p. m.

EASTER SUNDAY CONCERT

On Easter Sunday night, at the Colonial Theatre, there will be given a concert and entertainment under the direction of the Messrs. Shubert, the executive staff of the theatre. Thomas H. Lothian, Grover C. Burkhart and Frank A. Cauley. It has been the custom these several years past for these popular gentlemen to present on Easter Sunday an entertainment of merit, and they have been successful in assembling excellent programs that have given great pleasure. The seats are on sale at the box office.

ADVISES SAVING BY WORKING CLASSES

Time Is Now When Increased Wages Make It Possible, Says B. C. Forbes

The following are extracts from the writings of B. C. Forbes, the financial expert, and they deal with various problems in investments. Mr. Forbes believes that America is to become the greatest nation of investors. He advises working men and women to save some of the surplus from increased wages due to the war to prepare for the rainy day. Read what he has to say. It is for the benefit of the man or woman with a few dollars to invest, as well as to him who has thousands.

"The time to save is when saving is possible. With millions of people that time is now. In comparison with the possibilities the amount that has been saved, according to all accounts, has been disappointing.

"The president of the savings bank having the largest deposits in the world recently stated: 'The increase in savings bank deposits, while large, has not been commensurate with the great prosperity that has prevailed throughout the country for more than two years. This is difficult to explain, as it is well known that savings bank depositors are thrifty.'"

* * *

"Authoritative figures show that eighty of every hundred men who die in this country leave no income-producing investments or property of any kind.

"Not only so, but approximately 1,250,000 former wage earners are now living on charity at a cost to the country of between $200,000,000 and $250,000,000 a year.

"The number of women left unprovided for by their husbands and compelled to enter the ranks of labor in order to maintain themselves and their children is a blot on our national record."

* * *

Quoting C. L. Close, head of the United States Steel Corporation's gigantic department for looking after the interests of the 260,000 employes, Mr. Forbes tells of their plan of inducing these employes to save and invest their earnings:

"Our profit sharing plan, says Mr. Close, "is really an arrangement to encourage our workers to save money, and because of the simplicity of its operation it has attained remarkable results. Judge Gary, our chairman, who takes the deepest possible personal interest in directing the movement and is chairman of the committee handling it, estimated that no fewer than 60,000 of our employes have become stockholders under this plan. Last January over 230,000 employes subscribed for $6,-150,000 worth of the common shares.

"Time and again during my visits to our steel plants workmen have told me that they had just never had a dollar until they became interested in our stock—subscribed for it. As a matter of fact I could say practically the same thing myself, for I was a foreman when it was inaugurated in 1903, and had not until them made a systematic practice of saving any money.

"The very fact that a workman elects to have regularly a part of his wages indicates that he has a degree of prudence and foresight that he is not a spendthrift and indifferent. And that far more of those who save systematically become owners of their own home than those who do not save a fixed part of their wages every month. The spirit of saving seems to create in a man greater self-respect, more stability, a sense of responsibility and healthy ambition."

"I hope your advocacy of the widespread adoption by corporations of plans to facilitate the systematic saving of part of their wages by workers will be taken up and carried out successfully."

* * *

"Now the taste for saving grows with cultivation. Americans are not by nature a thrifty race. The percentage of investors in this country is smaller than in the principal countries of Europe. But once overcome the initial barriers, once induce the American workman or the American house wife to begin saving regularly and in right cases out of ten the habit will be continued.

* * *

"There is more opportunity for saving in the United States than in England or Germany or France or Italy as the margin between income and absolutely necessary expenditures is much larger here.

TO LIST CENTURY STEEL ON THE BOSTON EXCHANGE

Century Steel, one of the most successful of low-priced industrial stocks, is to be listed on the Boston Stock Exchange. It is understood, in accordance of the desire of the exchange to get other stocks to counterast the present preponderance of coppers.

The company is capitalized for $750,000, authorized issue, of which $500,000 is outstanding. The headquarters of the company are in Poungkeepsie, N. Y. There is no preferred and no bonds.

A limited amount of treasury stock is offered by Ernest E. Smith & Co., No. 52 Devonshire street, Boston.

LANCASTER THEATRE

A notable all-photoplay bill will be offered at the Lancaster Theatre the first half of the week, when there will be shown the first Boston showings of the William Fox production, "The Girl With the Champagne Eyes," in which the beautiful Jewel Carmen is pictured in the leading role.

EGYPTIAN INFLUENCE IN DAINTY CABARET GOWN

The beauty of the prismatic colors skillfully woven into this resplendent cabaret gown instantly arrests the eye. The shimmering and everchanging effects are secured by placing "drops" of various colors over one another, each in a softly blending tone. Embroidered beads give it an Egyptian aspect.

MASSACHUSETTS TRUST CO. DEPOSITORS ARE GROWING

The Massachusetts Trust Company continues to add year by year a broader base to its pyramid. Established a little over four years ago its deposits have sprung from a little over a million dollars to over ten millions—a record which is hardly paralleled in the history of banking in Massachusetts. Its condition is especially strong and liquid at this time, neither borrowing nor rediscounting its paper.

The number of its accounts is approaching 15,000, the savings department in particular showing marked increases.

The main office of the Massachusetts Trust Company is at No. 55 Federal street. It also maintains an uptown office at No. 238 Huntington avenue.

MISS HERSEY TO TALK ON "MASTER OF THE WORLD"

At the evening service in Trinity Church, Newton Centre, tomorrow, Miss Hersey will deliver an address entitled "The Master of the World." A special musical program has been arranged, including Gounod's "Gallia," with Hubert Y. Robison as tenor soloist. Organ recital will begin at 7 p. m. Holy communion at 10 a. m. Morning service at 10.45 a. m.

NEW MAIN OFFICES FOR HANOVER TRUST

"Conservative banking" will be the watchword of the Hanover Trust Company, at its new main office which will be opened Monday at No. 268 Washington street, corner of Water street.

McGRAWS LIKED TO REPEAT

Fullerton Strong for Giants, Though Figures Reds, Cubs and Cardinals Dangerous

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

NEW YORK GIANTS—In military service, 3; subject to first call, 4.

Practically unhurt by the war, affected less by the financial condition of baseball and by salary cuts than any other club in the National League, and with fewer gaps to strengthen, and more and better material to strengthen them than any other team, the Giants look better this Spring than they did a year ago.

There are two places at which the runner-up of the World's champions may fall: pitching and second base. Of these two, the pitching seems to be worrying McGraw the most.

While McGraw's team really has more strength than it had last season, it does not promise to have the cinch victory that it enjoyed. There are three clubs much strengthened that have come up to challenge him. These are Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis.

They are not as strong as are the Giants, but they have one advantage. Each team has strengthened and built up along special lines and those lines are on the "Beat the Giants" plan.

CANNOT TAKE IT EASY.

It is an axiom in baseball that the pennant-winner of one season must play harder the next year, for the simple reason that every club pays special attention to beating the champion.

The Giants really outclass their league, with the possible exception of Cincinnati, which is a better club if it can hold its strength against the drain.

The fate of Herzog helps and hurts the Giants. Undoubtedly the best move was to trade Herzog after the insurrection last Fall which proved beyond doubt that the fiery second baseman cannot play ball under McGraw in peace.

This is the third time they have clashed and each time because Herzog objects to the McGraw system of playing ball and because McGraw insists on obedience from all. There was nothing to do but lose Herzog—but, at the same time, losing Herzog took one of the brainiest and best players from the Giants, reduced their amount of aggressiveness and weakened the team.

DOYLE HAS SLOWED UP.

The second base problem is going to worry McGraw. He has brought back Larry Doyle, who has slowed up very much. His damaged leg may not be strong enough to enable him serve well during part of the season. He has the brains and can hit, and Gleason has capable youngsters to understudy him. He blundered in Killing Pete Kilduff, and cannot afford to lose Jimmy Smith.

The Giants are less hurt by war demands than almost any club, losing only two substitute infielders and a recruit pitcher. The team is not liable to receive any great shock in the draft this Summer, although Davey Robertson may go.

There is a point: If Robertson can go, it makes an automatic opening for Young, one of the most promising ball players to come into the majors in years. It was freely predicted that Young would win a regular job in the outfield, when Robertson remained, and that he might even displace Benny Kauff.

The outfield will remain in rank close to the top of the league in speed, defensive and hitting power in any event. Kauff, with the enlargement of the cranium considerably reduced by the World's Series, ought to be a better ball player than he has shown in the National League.

BIG BOOST FOR BARNES.

If the Giants fail this season the failure will be in the pitching department. There was a lot of hope for some of the challengers that the Giants' pitching staff would be fatally weak this season, but the acquisition of Barnes from Boston covered that up.

Barnes really is a corking pitcher, although his showing with Boston last season was not strong. With a team like the Giants back of him he ought to win thirty games and win almost twenty of them.

Just what the figures will show I am anxious to see, but at this stage of the study of the teams it looks Gianty.

TOMMY SHEA IS WINNER OVER CHICK HAYES

By J. P. MURPHY.

Tommy Shea of New Haven, Conn., stepped a notch higher in the featherweight division by outpointing Chick Hayes of Indianapolis, in ten lusty rounds at the Commercial A. C. Hayes small of stature, busy and willing, was making his first appearance in Boston. He stood up gamely against the elongated Shea, but was lost when he could not get in the damaging blows he aimed for Tommy's body. Shea lulled his foe's every rush, tied up his arms and then played away at his head, scoring practically at will.

Quick as a lightning, Hayes' only hope was a long overhand right-hand swing. This he landed effectively a few times in the closing rounds, but not enough to ruffle the cool Shea countenance.

There was little real milling during the early sessions. What clean hitting was done can be credited to Shea, Toward the halfway mark, however, things began to get warm. Hayes accomplished his best work in the ninth round. He tore after Tommy, but the latter more than evened it up in the final session and well merited Larry Conley's award.

Henri LeBoeuf of New Bedford, surprised the crowd by besting Larry Burns of South Boston, in their six-round battle. LeBoeuf dropped Burns for the count of nine in the third round, but didn't have the stuff to finish him.

Paul Demers of New Bedford, who was to have met Frankie Brown of New York in the semi-final, was suffering from acute indigestion and his physician advised him not to go on. Demers displayed a certificate of disability, which was read from the ring.

The club substituted Al Gerard of the North End and Tony Vatlin of Brighton. The latter won easily, although Gerard made it a real scrap all the way.

Bunch O'Neil of Lynn and Frank Toronto of Jamaica Plain drew in the six-round preliminary.

LAJOIE'S SALE LEAVES McGILL IN QUANDARY

Indianapolis, March 23.—Announcement of the sale by the Toronto club of the International League of Napoleon Lajoie to the Cleveland Nationals, gave a setback to the search of James C. McGill, owner of the Indianapolis American Association team, for a manager to succeed Jack Hendricks, now with the St. Louis Nationals. McGill had a tentative agreement with Lajoie to manage the Indians, provided the former major leaguer could obtain his release from the Toronto club. He tried to reach Lajoie at his home in Cleveland, but was unable to get in touch with him.

McGill, owner of the Indianapolis team, says that he knows nothing about his sale to the Brooklyn club by Toronto. What's more, the veteran says he will not report to Manager Robinson even if the report proves true. He will refuse to manage Indianapolis in the event that the International League lays dead this season.

Hot Springs Turf Talk.

Hot Springs, March 22.—After Broncho Billy's victory in the second race he changed ownership to E. E. Phillips and him by the claiming process.

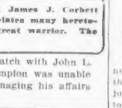
Starter Dade suspended Jockey Mooney for three days for disobedience at the post.

High Cost, recently bought by Emil Herz for a reported price of $15,000, will be shipped to Louisville with the first consignment headed that way.

Jockey Kelsay announced that he had signed a contract to ride this Spring for John Overford, the wealthy Kentenner, whose horses will be trained by W. J. Young.

Sixteen to One, which caused Jockey Sands to be injured, will, as a result of his bolting into the fence, have to be destroyed.

"JOHN L." AS I KNEW HIM"



BY JAMES J. CORBETT.

THIS is the thirtieth chapter of a series which James J. Corbett is writing on "John L. as I Knew Him." It relates many heretofore unpublished incidents in the life of the great warrior. The next installment will appear Monday.

On March 15, 1892, the articles covering my match with John L. Sullivan were signed in New York City. The champion was unable to be on hand, but James Wakely, who was managing his affairs at the time, acted in his behalf.

William A. Brady, my manager, using the funds turned over to him by my backers, deposited a certified check for $2,500 to bind the match.

Wakely at once put up $2,500 for Sullivan. Then came the question concerning a stakeholder. Wakely suggested that Phil Dwyer act as the final stakeholder. But to this I objected on these grounds:

"I should be delighted to accept were it not that he is my personal friend and has offered to back me.

"If it should happen that some question or other arises about the payment of the stakes and I should get them, everybody would say that it was because Dwyer was prejudiced in my favor.

"I don't want this match to wind up with any such feeling. I want the money to go where it belongs without argument, and I want to avoid right now the possibility of any comeback."

The argument over a permanent stakeholder continued for some time without result and then George Dickerson was named as temporary stakeholder of the $5,000, the permanent stakeholder to be named later.

ARTICLES QUICKLY SIGNED.

Clippings which I have before me and which concern that meeting read in part:

"The next step was the time of fighting and the battle ground. Corbett conceded everything, even to the demand of the other side to have the fight during the first week of September.

"Both men liked New Orleans and both agreed to give the Olympic Club of that city a preference."

Without much squabbling, the following permanent articles of agreement were drawn up and signed:

"First—The match is to decide the heavyweight championship of the world, a purse of twenty thousand dollars ($20,000), and a purse of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000).

"Second—The contest shall take place before the Olympic Club of New Orleans, La., on Wednesday, September 7, 1892, in case the said Olympic Club refuses to give a purse of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000), the contest shall take place before a club to be mutually agreed upon by the signers of these articles.

"Third—The contest shall be under Marquis of Queensberry rules, the gloves shall be the smallest the club will allow and other details of the contest itself shall be left to the decision of the Olympic Club, before which the contest shall take place. The club selected shall name the referee.

CLUB ACCEPTED TERMS.

"Fourth—The sum of twenty-five hundred dollars ($2,500) has been deposited by each party. It is agreed that the remainder of the stake of ten thousand dollars ($10,000) a side shall be deposited on the days named here—June 1, $2,500; July 15, $2,500; August 25, $2,500.

"Fifth—The final stakeholder shall be agreed upon on the date of the second deposit—June 1.

"Sixth—Should either party fail to comply with these articles, the money then in the hands of the temporary stakeholder shall be forfeited to the party which shall have fulfilled its obligations according to this paper.

J. C KENNEDY.
Witness for Corbett.
JAMES WAKELY.
For John L. Sullivan.
JOHN McDONOUGH.
Witness for Sullivan.
JAMES J. CORBETT."

Before the meeting adjourned a telegram was sent to Charles Noel, president of the Olympic Club in New Orleans. It informed him that the articles for the Sullivan-Corbett match had been signed and that the bout would be put on in his city provided a satisfactory purse was offered. Noel at once wired this reply:

New Orleans, La., March 15, 1892.

"Will give $25,000 for Corbett-Sullivan match. Will mail articles tomorrow."

The Olympic Club offer was accepted.

TOM SHARKEY ARMED GUARD AND DRAWING DOWN $30 PER WEEK

NEW YORK, March 23.—Tom Sharkey of pugilistic fame, is an armed guard at a New Jersey munitions plant.

He wears a uniform, carries a rifle and works six days a week at $5 per day.

Sharkey is broke. In his prime Tom earned a fortune in the ring.

LAST OF THREE JACKS IS SHOWING IN BOSTON

Jack McAuliffe, retired lightweight champion of the world, is on the road to another title. The old battler has been doing his bit at local showhouses all week, and is packing them in daily.

Youngsters and oldtimers alike are showing great interest in the former champion's ring career of long ago, and his breezy talk proves an attractive extra feature.

McAuliffe is one of the most popular of the old-time ring stars, and his famous battle with Jim Carney and Revere is still pointed out as the fight of fights by veteran Greater Boston fans.

West Point Five Picks Hahn

West Point, N. Y., March 23.—Corporal L. Hahn of Wisconsin has been elected captain of the Army basketball team for next season. Frederick B. Buttel of California is the new manager.

Last Night in the Ring

Woonsocket, R. I., March 23.—Jack O'Neil of this city won the decision over Jack Savage of Brockton in twelve rounds. Hammering Howls of Woonsocket defeated Jim McDonald of Providence. In the sixth round, McDonald was knocked against a post and rendered unconscious. He was later taken to the Woonsocket Hospital suffering from concussion of the brain.

* * *

Buffalo, N. Y., March 23.—Lew Tendler, the Philadelphia lightweight sensation, stopped Frankie Nelson, the Polish iron man, in four rounds here.

* * *

Munice, Ind., March 23.—Jack Dillon of Indianapolis and Georgie Bill Brett of Toledo fought ten rounds in a draw here. Dillon was knocked to the floor in the tenth round.

* * *

Des Moines, Ia., March 23.—Tommy Gibbons of St. Paul won a newspaper decision over Gus Christie, Indianapolis middleweight, in their twelve-round bout here.

* * *

Peoria, Ill., March 23.—Pal Moore of Memphis and Roy Moore of Minneapolis, bantamweights, fought a ten-round draw here.

MINNEAPOLIS IN LINE FOR BIG TITLE BOUT

By EDDIE GEIGER,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, March 23.—Within the next two weeks a bowling "feud" throughout the country will know just where the Jess Willard-Fred Fulton heavyweight championship match is to be held. Bids for the contest will close on April 5, according to the schedule.

It will take a few days to decide on the best spot and the location will then be announced. To date the bids have come from Minneapolis, $125,000. There may be a higher bid, but indications are quite it is considerably higher that city will get the title battle.

Articles call for a fight to a decision. Minneapolis thought allow the referee to give his verdict after the fight ends, but the fact is the articles that the commission has the power to make it a decision fight and they have the power to stretch the ten-round limit to twenty. It is understood that both changes will be effected if the fight is offered at Minneapolis.

JESS WILLARD SIGNS FINAL PAPERS MONDAY

Chicago, March 23.—Because Jess Willard must go to Baltimore to sell some of his cheese horses, the bouts between the champion and Fred Fulton to fight for the world's heavyweight title will be signed here Monday, it was announced today. The ceremony originally was set for Tuesday.

JABS AND JOLTS

CHARLEY THEVRALL is offered to meet Tommy Ellis of Paterson, N. J., at the Dorchester A. C. Monday night. Ellis has Matchmaker Jack Leonard to substitute Johnny Noonan of Providence. Trail says Noonan is too heavy for him. Noonan is in the shape to fight Saturday night, but Leonard is the real scrapper. Trail is willing to meet Noonan Monday night. Billy Carter Young feels sure he can get Noonan to fight Ellis. Young says he knows Noonan's record to bear in mind that both changes will be effected if the fight is offered at Minneapolis.

* * *

JIM CONNAUGHTON, manager of George Bellisimo and Dave Powers, has started his spring campaign in earnest. He is match for any featherweight in New England.

* * *

WALTER BUTLER of Revere has decided to let Eddie Martin's welterweight crown. Martin is waiting in back some more and figures he can give Butler a trimming. Martin weighs 142 pounds, ringside. Wants more. Butler is willing to bet on a winner's take-all basis. What could be fairer?

* * *

BILLY ROLFE'S busy yard boxing team has been knocked into a cocked hat. In other words, it's no more. With the exception of Harvey Brown, every member of the squad has volunteered for constructive work in France. Billy Hall, who recently won the 145 and 175-pound New England amateur championships; Howard Hall, Harry Brown, Jerry Healey and John Dooney are the young men who will visit the Emerald Isle.

* * *

LARRY BURNS of South Boston and Henri Le Boeuf of New Bedford, who get up a scrap at the Commercial A. C. next Monday night, will meet in a return contest at the Armory A. A. next Tuesday night. They are billed to do battle in the right-round semi-final between Eddie Nelson of Malden and Angie Reiser of Somerville are the contestants in the main scrap.

* * *

AS NEXT Friday is Good Friday, the directors of the Commercial A. C. have decided to cancel their weekly show. The next entertainment will be held two weeks hence.

SOX AND ROBINS IN BATTLE AT CAMP PIKE

Army Cantonment Park, First in Country, Dedicated Today—Stands Packed

By HENRY L. DAILY.

Little Rock, Ark., March 23.—The new army cantonment baseball park at Camp Pike was to be dedicated this afternoon by the Red Sox and Brooklyn Robins.

The park, the first of its kind in the country, is located outside of the cantonment, where 42,000 soldiers are located, and also has within its borders 121 ball teams. The boys in khaki turned out en masse for the contest.

The entire Sox party made the trip. The regulars were to play today, with the Yanigans remaining over for a game tomorrow, while the first squad returns to the Springs for a battle with the Robins.

Dutch Leonard took his turn on the mound in yesterday drill over at the Sox. He is slightly over weight, and wore a huge rubber shirt in order to take off some of the unnecessary poundage he is walking around with.

DRILL A SHORT ONE.

The midday session was short and sweet, owing to a thunderstorm in the early morning setting down the diamond pretty well and the sun failing to get on the job until nearly noon.

The trail around the bases was soft and soggy so Manager Barrow put the boys through a very light workout. The session consisted of about an hour's batting, some infield work and fly chasing.

Hoblitzel was on first, Evers on second, Scott short and Melnnis on third; Ruth, Jaynes, McCabe, Mays, Bush and Leonard all took their turns on the slab.

Paul Smith, Whiteman, Hooper and Strunk filled the outfield garden while Schang and Mayer alternated with Ivan Howley on the receiving end. Thomas and Flancy helped out on the infield.

TO LENGTHEN DRILLS.

Starting next week Manager Barrow is going to let the boys ride out to Maple Park and return on foot. The practice is advancing rapidly and the workouts are to be lengthened.

Barrow is more than pleased with the way the Sox are hustling, and although he says very little, he is very observant, keeping in touch with every move and player on the field. He is one of the most oppressive the Sox have encountered this Spring, and the rookies and players were glad when Barrow called "time."

SOX NOTES

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 23.—Carl Le Mays damaged finger is improving. He pitched a little batting practice, but is not in the fielding for fear of opening the cut.

* * *

JOHNNY EVERS says his arm is getting strong every day. The Texas sun and the Sox is an excellent training grounds and says only a few days more and he will be ready.

* * *

REV. FR. MICHAEL LYONS of South Boston, who has been at the Sox for several days, left for home today. He intends to stop over in several Southern cities, arriving back about April 1.

* * *

WYCKOFF is working hard to get into shape and says he is going better and better every day.

* * *

PAUL SMITH, the new outfielder, gives the Sox fans a treat in the way he covers the park after practice every day, and when he gets his batting eye working he will be a star.

* * *

JOE BUSH is steadily rounding into form during the Winter he worked at the Millside steel Works in Pennsylvania.

NIEHOFF STILL BALKS, BUT PREPARES TO PLAY

Denver, Colo., March 23.—Bert Niehoff, Philadelphia second baseker and one of the Mack's numerous holdouts, is in Denver today. He will limber up on a local diamond for a few days but declares he will not report to the Mack camp unless President Baker of the Phillies meets his salary demands.

STAR JOCKEY INJURED IN SPILL AT OAKLAWN

Hot Springs, Ark., March 23.—Jockey Sande, one of the most prominent riders here, was badly hurt. He was riding Sixteen to One in the second race at Oaklawn Park, when he was crowded against the fence by Scratch One. His left leg and foot were injured.

HERZOG PICKS GIANTS TO REPEAT: THAT IS WHY HE'S PEEVED

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 23.—Charley (Buck) Herzog, who was traded by the New York Giants to the Boston Braves, and has been holding out for more money and a bonus, predicts another pennant winner for McGraw.

Herzog gave this as one of his reasons for holding out. He says he is entitled to a salary which would equal the bonus he would get for playing in the World's Series next October.

HARVARD AGREES WITH YALE ON RACE TERMS

Terms of the proposed three Yale and Harvard rowing races announced today, disclose the events to be the most unique ever scheduled between the old rivals in their annual crew contests. They were arranged here by a conference between President A. Lawrence Lowell of the Harvard Navy and Fred W. Allen, Yale 1899, former captain of two Eli crews.

It was announced today that the races have been approved by professor Robert Corwin, chairman of the Yale athletic board of control, and Professor Le Baron Briggs, chairman of the Harvard athletic committee.

The terms state that the universities shall train three crews each, to be known as the first and second varsity and freshman eights.

About May 1 representatives of the two navies will dig a coin and the toss shall have the privilege of selecting the place for the race of the first eights. Photos are to be taken of the crews at the time of the toss. Hines and the Charles River Practice Association will be the men and the Housatonic is the new two-mile course about the city of Derby on which Yale planned to row Cornell last season, when the war shutted the crews from the map.

The winner of the toss will select the home course. Yale picking the Housatonic because its rowing squad will be assembled there before practice about May 1, in preparation for the Yale, Columbia, Pennsylvania Dual Regatta.

The terms state that the freshman race shall be rowed on the same course as that selected for the second varsity eight race is decided.

Yale and Cornell Not to Enter Crews in Navy's Regatta

The Yale Faculty, it was learned today, has decreed that the varsity crew shall not row any races far from home this season. Thus Yale will not be at the proposed big regatta at Annapolis sponsored by the Government.

Cornell also is loath to go so far with finances not available rowing now so definitely planned between Princeton, Columbia, Harvard and Navy, it is known are keen for a big race.

MIRACLE MAN IS STUCK ON HIS NEW MODEL

Would Claim Flag, He Says, if He Had Herzog and the Rabbit

By NICK FLATLEY.

Miami, Fla., March 23.—The first week of practice for the Braves ends this afternoon and finds the athletes in what the experts call the pink of condition.

Seven days of double exercise under the torrid Florida sun has peeled most of the superfluous avoirdupois off our diamond heroes and worked all kinks and curlicues out of ligaments and muscles.

"I'm willing to have a young team, but it will be fast and peppy," was the way Manager Stallings sized up things at practice this morning.

"If I had the Rabbit, Herzog, Konetchy and Rudolph with this bunch, I wouldn't hesitate a minute to claim the pennant, which is something I haven't done while I have been in baseball, which is quite a long spell.

SQUAD ON ITS TOES.

Though George is inclined to optimism, anyhow, in the bright and sunshiny springtime, he said a mouthful in the foregoing. The Braves have started to cut loose and show something, and a lot of the youngsters look like prospects who will make themselves known in regular baseball before many moons have rolled by.

Another fill between the Regulars and Seminoles was on today's program, with the Braves anxious to avoid big scores, as the series now stands two games to one in favor of what they used to call the Yannigans. They stepped out yesterday and beat the veterans, 2 to 1, in a fast but somewhat ragged game. They did the same on merit, too, for they had a local youngster, one Victor Rooney, pitching for the Regulars and they fell down in the other two.

Yannivan, Worcester recruit, performed in the box for the Yannigans today with plenty of stuff, but that aided pursuit of the youngsters from Derby on which Yale planned to row Cornell last season, when the war shutted the crews from the map.

YANIVAN HUSKY YOUTH.

Canavan, who is a southpaw, appears to be a promising finger. He is a husky little chap, who has most of the tricks of the pitching art rocked away in his suitcase.

Hugh Jones he came within a hair's breadth of picking a runner off first, and didn't make anything like a balk in doing it. He is a fast worker, when he reported, as he had been coaching baseball at Yale during the Winter, and, accordingly, gave the boys a nice curve to swing at.

Manager Stallings and Coach Slattery are much pleased with the young man and they have taken a shine to him and groomed for a place on the varsity string.

Hughes recovered for the first time, also, and had the opposition swinging wild most of the time.

BRAVES NOTES

MIAMI, Fla., March 23.—Young Murray has been showing up well in camp and stands on at the plate like a real hitter, and when he connects with the ball looks like a ball player every day.

* * *

MASSEY Wills will eventually get a chance at Johnny Kilbane's featherweight title, according to Manager Stallings. He is a fighting fool.

* * *

AFTER the game with Henry gave an exhibition of good driving. He sure hits the ball a mighty clout and has some of the outfielders leaping from the plate, which is a good thing, as it keeps them limber.

* * *

JUNKS FLORIDA rather, who has been working in camp with the Braves for a few days, injured his shoulder in attempting to throw out a runner at second. He will be out of the game for a while, as his arm is badly wrenched.

* * *

TY COB the relentless of Texas Stallings to be out in a few days. After Williams is as fixed as nails physically, he will be asked to work himself into shape with all speed he can.

* * *

MARTIN SHERIDAN IN DANGEROUS CONDITION

New York, March 23.—Martin Sheridan, one of the greatest athletes the country has ever known, is dangerously ill in St. Vincent's Hospital. He was stricken with pleuro-pneumonia at first and developed heart trouble, to which he is attached as a first grade detective.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN MARCH 23, 1918. BOSTON.

Fall of Roman Republic Warning Against Farming Out Public Functions

Every intelligent American, even though he has not had the good fortune to attend the high school and there study ancient history, knows about the great Roman republic of the ancient world. We all know that it started as a little peasant community; that it soon cast out its kings and set up a republic in the midst of a world of kings and tyrants; that the soldiers of its legions were proud citizens of a republic and not the slaves of a king, and that these citizen-soldiers conquered the world.

The ordinary boy and girl who studies the history of Rome in the high school generally goes no farther than the bare outline of Rome's great dramatic story, touching only its most significant features. But to the deeper student who goes farther into the details of Roman history, the thing of interest and profit is the evidence which it affords him of the extraordinary and mysterious way in which history tends to repeat itself; of the strange fact that however much the world has advanced in material progress, human nature has not changed in 2,000 years; that the things which the Romans did we, under the same circumstances, would do and are doing today; that the temptations that operated on the Romans would operate on us; that the errors which destroyed the Roman republic, and reduced its people so low that there was no nation in the world so poor as to do them reverence, would also destroy our republic.

Whatever our political point of view may be, whether we be reactionary or radical, there is no intelligent educated man who does not understand that the Roman republic fell because the victories of the Roman citizen-legions brought wealth to Rome which was unfairly distributed and which increased in concentration by geometrical progression as wealth once started on the course of concentration always tends to increase; that these "dangerous swollen fortunes," as Roosevelt calls them, were dangerously used so that the bold Roman peasantry was destroyed and political corruption became the dominating practice of government; men went into politics not for honor, nor for patriotism, but for the acquisition of private fortunes.

When we appreciate how history repeats itself and what was the cause of Rome's decline and fall, and when we further appreciate the significant warning which Professor Ferrari, the greatest living authority on Roman history, who has studied the economic and social conditions of the United States, has uttered, namely, that wealth is concentrating faster in the United States than it ever did in any equal period in Rome, that it is not only concentrating faster in the hands of a few, but that it is concentrating faster even in comparison with the increase of total wealth than it did in Rome, ought we not to arouse ourselves to correct the evil which we know destroyed Rome, and destroyed the great democracy of Athens also?

The evil that the concentration of private wealth did to the greatest of our ancient democracies at Athens is not so generally known as the evil wealth wrought in Rome. But let anyone read the speech of Demosthenes on the Crown with this inquiry in mind and he will feel rather sober when he finishes, if he loves the American republic and government of, for and by the people, and has the self-respect to wish to govern himself.

One of the evil ways by which the Roman people, not appreciating at first whither it was leading, permitted their institutions to be undermined, was the evil of allowing private individuals to make a private profit out of the doing of those things which should have been done entirely for the public by public agents and servants, with the entire profit going to the public. In other words, it was the permitting of middlemen to perform for private profit functions which are strictly governmental. It was the failure of the Roman people to insist that the things which were all public should be done by public servants upon an adequate salary paid by the Roman people, with all the profit going to the government, and with all the control of the methods in the hands of the government. They had no railroads and street railways and gas and electric light companies in those days. If they had, the nation probably would have gone to pieces all the sooner, because they would have farmed out the supplying of the public necessaries of transportation and light and heat to private individuals just as we farm them out in America and just as our farming out these necessary public functions has been the principal cause of the great and dangerous concentration of wealth in America which every serious, thoughtful man knows threatens the stability of our republic.

In a great many ways, of course, we have profited by the experience of the Romans. The government educates our children. The government provides our fire protection, supplies us with water and maintains our streets and bridges. The public also collects its own taxes. Now, taxes are extremely high today, but you never hear anybody denouncing Tax Collector Treiry, or Internal Revenue Collector Malley, or Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, or Mr. Roper, the national tax collector, because the government through its SALARIED AGENTS DOES ITS OWN COLLECTING OF TAXES.

Now, the Romans, following their vicious practice of farming out every government function to middlemen and permitting middlemen to make private fortunes out of it, farmed out their taxes for collection. Big business in Rome organized syndicates and corporations and they would get certain districts assigned to them either by bidding or by corrupt partiality of the Roman officials. Then they would proceed, just as our public service companies proceed, to tax the community.

Of all the things connected with the Roman government, the most hated and despised were the tax collectors. Mommsen, the greatest of the classic Roman historians, says of this system:

The system of Roman financial administration, under which the indirect taxes as well as the domain revenues were levied by means of middlemen, in itself granted to the Roman capitalist class the most extensive advantages at the expense of those liable to taxation.

Professor Ferrari, as we have said the greatest living authority on Roman history, says of these middlemen who collected the taxes which the Roman government ought to have collected itself and which, most fortunately, our government does collect for itself:

The tax farmers, all of them either Romans or Italians, enjoyed the open patronage of the government in their systematic pillage. There were few devices either of fraud or violence which their ingenuity left untried. They would force the natives into debt in order to pay the taxes and then eventually despoil them of all their goods. No wonder that the district (where these middlemen tax collectors operated) came to be regarded as the happy hunting ground of millionaires!

So hateful were these tax collectors in doing what the government should have done for itself that they came to be regarded as sinners the moment they became tax collectors. It was not that they represented the Roman government, whose power they used for their own private advantage, but they abused that power, as middlemen exercising government power always have abused it and always will while human nature is human nature. The hatred which the people of the ancient world bore against these tax collectors, those ancient predecessors of the modern private managers of our public service corporations, is interestingly illustrated in an account which the Bible gives of an incident in the life of Christ:

And Jesus entered and was passing through Jericho, and there was a man by the name of Zaccheus, and he was the head of the tax collectors and was rich, and he tried to see who Jesus was, but could not for the crowd, because he was short in stature. So he ran on ahead and climbed up into a sycamore tree to see Jesus, for he was to pass that way. And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and said to him, "Zaccheus, come down, for today I must stay at your house." Then Zaccheus made haste to come down and received him with joy. BUT ON SEEING IT EVERYONE BEGAN TO COMPLAIN, SAYING, "HE HAS GONE IN TO EAT WITH A MAN WHO IS A SINNER."

Great as was their confidence and reverence for Christ, yet it was not so great as their suspicion and detestation of the tax collector.

When Christ came out of the house of the tax collector, in order to restore the confidence of the people, he had the tax collector say in their hearing:

Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor, and, if I have taken anything from any man wrongfully, I will give back four-fold.

To which Christ replied:

Today has salvation come to this house! For the Son of Man came to seek and to save that which has been lost.

At another time, when Christ was distinguishing between legitimate and illegitimate amusements, he said:

To what shall I compare this generation? It is like children sitting in the market places, who call their playmates and say, "We piped to you, but you did not dance. We lamented, but you did not beat your breast." For John came neither eating nor drinking and men say, "He has a demon." The Son of Man came eating and drinking and men say, "HERE IS A GLUTTON AND A WINE-DRINKER, A FRIEND OF TAX COLLECTORS AND SINNERS!"

The contagion of money making by graft is the most powerful of all mental and moral and immoral contagions. In Rome it destroyed the patriotism and public spirit of nearly everyone. Cicero, as Pro-Consul to one of the Asiatic provinces, was obliged to separate even Brutus from some of his ill-gotten usury and tax extortions, to that gentleman's surprise and indignation.

The practice of farming out public functions to middlemen, whether it be taxing, or military protection, or transportation by railroads and street railways, or education, or the supplying of light and heat, runs counter to human nature. It will always be a source of irritation, suspicion and discontent among the people, a source of danger to the government, and will sooner or later lead to a revolution (as it did in Rome) which will destroy the wealth in the hands of those who improperly acquired it or of their descendants.

SIGN THIS PETITION AND GET DECENT STREET CAR SERVICE

The Mayor of Boston.
The Chairman of the Finance Commission of Boston.
The Public Service Commission of Massachusetts.

And many of the most clear-sighted citizens of this community have declared that the true solution of the street railway problem upon which the Legislature is about to pass is:

TO PUT THE BOSTON ELEVATED UNDER FULL AND EXCLUSIVE PUBLIC CONTROL.

So that every dollar spent in building its service up to fit the needs of our growing community may be spent solely in the interest of the People as a whole.

This plan deals fairly with those who have invested money in the Elevated, for it gives them the State's guarantee of generous dividends and the privilege of rejecting the plan altogether if they are not satisfied with its terms.

These investors are likely to get no return at all unless the State comes to their relief. AND THE PRESENT FIVE-CENT FARE IS LIKELY TO BE MUCH INCREASED WITHOUT ANY GUARANTEE OF BETTER SERVICE IF THE PLAN OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION IS REJECTED BY THE LEGISLATURE.

If you believe that this plan should be adopted by the Legislature, sign with your full name and address the Petition which appears below and forward it without delay to the Petition Editor, Boston American, No. 80 Summer Street.

Act in this vital matter promptly. GET YOUR FRIENDS TO SIGN. Do it now!

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in General Court Assembled:

We, the undersigned, citizens of the Metropolitan District served by the Boston Elevated Street Railway approve of the recommendation of the Public Service Commission that public directors be put in absolute control of the Boston Elevated Street Railway under such conditions and limitations as are set forth in the recommendation of the Public Service Commission; and we respectfully urge our Representatives in the Legislature to do everything they can to enact the recommendation of our public experts on Street Railway matters into law.

CONVENTIONS FENCE OUT TROUBLES FOR US

By Winifred Black

HE'S married, the great apostle of free love. Married by book, bell and candle, license, priest, bridesmaids, matron of honor, best man, wedding journey, old shoes, rice and all.

And just one little year ago he was standing up on platforms telling people that marriage was the only real slavery left on earth, and that the only way to freedom was through the gate of free love.

He made beautiful speeches about free love, and terrible ones about marriage.

He said the finest man and the most beautiful woman in the world were sure to get tired of each other if they tied themselves together with a marriage ceremony. He said that a wedding ring was a great, deal worse than any handcuff that ever was invented, and he declared that if he had to take a chance between a matrimonial noose and a hangman's rope, he'd choose the hangman and his rope, because it was sooner over and done with than the other noose.

He was really quite discouraging about matrimony.

Love was a fine thing, he said—when it was free love.

It was uplifting and ennobling, and glorious and beautiful, and enlightening and everything else that was fine and courageous, and beautiful and free—oh, it must be free; there must be no mistake about that! He said it was ignoble and brutal, and narrow and suspicious, to want to tie people down to a vow and the keeping of it. And now he's gone and tied himself and his brand new wife with the plain, old-fashioned, outrageous, ridiculous knot of matrimony.

What About These?

He says it's all because he never met the right woman before. Isn't that interesting?

I wonder how some of the wrong women that he did meet before feel about it.

What an old, old story it is, and how many different ways there are to tell it; but they all end alike, and in the ending there is always the perfume of orange blossoms and the sound of wedding bells.

How strange it is that we never learn the truth about the conventions until we try to get along without them.

I remember thinking that a certain maiden aunt of mine was dreadfully narrow minded because she scolded me for talking with a stranger on a sleeping car once.

The stranger was good looking, comparatively young, and, dear me, he wore such stunning clothes and had such perfectly sweet manners!

But afterward, when I saw his picture in the paper and recognized Slim Jim, the pickpocket, as my agreeable traveling companion, I began to think that Aunt Julia wasn't always quite so stupid after all.

I heard two girls talking about a man the other day. One of them said to the other that any man who would borrow money from a woman wasn't worth much, and the other was cross, and said that the one was mid-Victorian, and the one seemed awfully overcome by this accusation.

Fence Trouble Out

I'd like to see the other about a year from now, when she thinks of all the nice things she might have had, or of all the good things she could have done for other people if she had kept that money.

Return it—oh, well, of course, this man may be the exception, like the sweet lemon or the white blackberry, but if he follows the rule he'll never even think of paying that money back.

If he was the sort of man who paid his debts he wouldn't have to borrow money from a woman.

I never hear people talking about the "conventions" and wishing there weren't any but I think of the time I opened the gate and let the goat who was out in the street come in to eat some of the nice, green grass, and play.

It wasn't very long before I was on the other side of the fence, and wondering how I ever thought that fences were a nuisance.
